Readers Thanked For Helping

In stories daily since March 12 we've told you about this dedicated band of eight young people, who, backed with a small army of volunteers, provides a host of recreation activities for about 200 handicapped children, teens and adults each month.

Readers have responded warmly, with close to $5,000, enough to keep the centre's 17 programs running at least an extra month while the provincial government decides whether it will continue its support.

Continuing donations are welcome and can be mailed or brought direct to the centre, at 2535 Government St., V8T 4P7. The latest list of donors will be published Saturday. Donations are tax deductible.

How has the campaign by the Times and radio station CJVI changed the lives of the centre's staff? Here's their report:

Handicapped Recreation Centre

The concept of aiding the integration of the handicapped individual into the mainstretm of the community by using already existing recreation facilities is a simple but fairly new idea. The idea that joining in activities in Victoria is a right of the handicapped person rather than a privilege has been shared by only a few up to this time.

The wide exposure gained by the dignified campaign put on by the Times and CJVI has resulted in this philosophy being made known to the public. The feedback we have received reflects overwhelmingly that Victorians agree with these aims.

Perhaps the most striking aspect of the campaign has been the expressions of interest, concern and support which we have received. It is obvious that many Victorians are willing to share what they have — be it time, energy or cash — when they realize the very real benefits to be gained.

It is reassuring to know that so many people in the community support and encourage the work done by the society. At times, especially when the bank account is running low, it is easy to wonder whether other people value the centre as much as we do who are involved day after day.

Judging from the large list of contributors, the thousands of dollars collected, the letters and calls received, it is apparent that Victorians agree with our objectives and are willing to give us full support.

Our programs offer a continual learning experience for staff, participants, volunteers and members of the public we come into contact with during activities. The coverage we have received is helping to break down the stereotype thinking and feeling that a lot of handicapped people had to put up with in the past.

The money raised to date has enabled us to meet salary and other operating expenses with no reduction in the number or quality of the programs offered. The money will last through April.

We have just learned from federal government officials that our Canada Works application has been rejected. We were considered acceptable by the ministerial advisory board, but there was not enough cash available to fund our "worthwhile" project. Now we are waiting for the results of the provincial government review and the Intermunicipal Committee deliberations on whether they will fund the society for this fiscal year. There are a lot of people relying on this funding coming through.

We would like to thank all the people who have shown their support to us during this campaign. The efforts of the staff of the Times and CJVI are especially appreciated as they have taken the time and been interested enough to understand and report on our goals in a clear and straightforward manner.

Thank you.

Private School Aid

Education Minister Pat McGeer Wednesday introduced promised legislation to provide financial support to independent schools in B.C.

The actual amount of money to be provided under the Indeppendent Schools Support Act is not spelled out in the legislation and McGeer said it will be some time before the amount is known.

The act, McGeer said, is a recognition by B.C. that "one province-wide school system does not provide sufficient choice for all parents to select the form of education their children will receive."

There are about 120 independent schools in B.C. with a total of about 23,000 students.

The funding of independent schools works on the basic principle that the more money they receive, the more accountable they must be to the government.

The legislation provides three different levels of funding for the schools to choose from, or they may choose not to participate at all.

There are three basic requirements for a school to be eligible for funding under the act:

—They must not sponsor any program which would foster or promote racial or ethnic superiority, religious intolerance or persecution or social change through violent action;

—School buildings must meet adequate standards;

—The schools must have been in existence for five years.

The first level of funding under the act, the non-instructional support grant, is designed to cover operating costs in the non-teaching areas.

The second level of funding, an instructional support grant, will provide payment of teachers' salaries. To receive this type of grant a school must meet certain specified standards in the areas of curriculum, evaluation and teacher certification.

The third funding level, a local support grant, would permit a local school board to authorize the provincial government to pay a percentage of the per pupil operating cost of the independent school.

To receive the third grant a school must show that it is providing a special educational service to the community

Budget Due Tonight

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald was scheduled to bring down his second budget at 5 p.m. (PST) today.

Macdonald had promised an expansionist budget which could bring tax breaks for lower income earners. The general view, however, was that this would not be a particularly startling budget because Macdonald did not have much room for financial manoeuvring.

Ottawa may need as much as $6 billion in borrowed money this year, a figure regarded by economists as near the upper limit of how much the government can absorb from the capital market and still leave enough for the private sector.

New Liquor Laws: Moderation Key

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Wine price cuts were announced today by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair in a bid to wean British Columbians away from hard liquor and beer.

The price cuts — effective May 1 — should average between 20 and 40 cents a bottle for both domestic and foreign wine.

Mair said the move reflects his view that wine is the drink of moderation.

The province's local wineries are encouraged under new liquor regulations announced by Mair to produce a product more acceptable to the palates of British Columbians.

The price cuts in wine will mean a drop in revenue to the government of $5 million to $6 million a year, Mair said.

The changes also allow for the first time a neighborhood pub-type of small, intimate drinking establishment serving both draught beer and hard liquor to be set up in hotels.

But the idea of selling wine and beer in corner grocery stores and the sale of hard liquor in beer parlors has been rejected.

British Columbians should develop a taste for wine, Mair said, and the new regulations reflect his rejection of the idea that beer is the drink of moderation.

"If there is a drink of moderation, wine is it," he said.

"We are taking some steps to encourage the consumption of wine, both imported and domestic, and hope that British Columbians will drink more of it — and less hard liquor and beer."

The price reductions will be brought about by a decrease in the percentage of markup.

The markup on B.C. wines will be reduced from 66 per cent to 46 per cent and the markup on imported wines will decrease from 117 per cent to 100 per cent.

But a bottom limit of $2.75 has been established for foreign wines, at least for a while.

A variety of changes in marketing and distribution rules have been made to allow British Columbia wineries to compete with the more established foreign brands.

Now, when British Columbians reach for their favorite French bordeaux at the liquor

NEWS BRIEFS

Challenge for AIB

OTTAWA (TNS) — In a progress report released Wednesday the Anti-Inflation Board said the next six months would be challenging. The report noted that controls have been in effect for almost 18 months and that since its inception inflation has come down in Canada. See Page 23.

Fire on Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — At least five persons were killed today in a pre-dawn fire aboard the Spanish factory trawler Dianteiro, 350 miles east of St. John's, Nfld., the search and rescue centre reported here.

Coffee Hits $4.43

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Folger Coffee Co. sent its wholesale price tag flying again Wednesday to a record $4.43 a pound.

Volcano Erupts

MOSCOW (UPI) — The long-dormant Los Island volcano in the Caspian Sea has staged a massive eruption that covered three quarters of the island under 23 feet of mud and rock, the official Tass news agency said today.

Pilot Goes Berserk

ZAMBOANGA, The Philippines (CP) — The pilot of a chartered airliner carrying military men on leave went berserk during the flight today, stepped out of the cockpit and opened fire with an automatic rifle, killing seven passengers and a stewardess, authorities said.

20 Day Break For Session

Party whips have agreed to a 2½-week adjournment of the legislature from April 6 to April 25, says government whip George Mussallem (SC — Dewdney).

NDP whip Dennis Cooke (NDP — New Westminster) confirmed that the opposition parties have agreed to the adjournment.

Mussallem said the government had proposed a one-week adjournment, but extended the recess at the request of the opposition parties.

In other legislative business, NDP leader Dave Barrett Wednesday became the first MLA to be ejected from the house this session.

Barrett got the heave-ho after refusing to withdraw a statement that Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm had lied to the legislature. See story on Page 29.

TRUDEAUS SEPARATING?

OTTAWA (CP)— A spokesman for the prime minister's office said today that it is extremely unlikely that Prime Minister Trudeau and his wife, Margaret, have agreed to a separation,

He was commenting on a report last night by Toronto television station CFTI that the Trudeaus had decided to separate.

The prime minister's press secretary said that because he had not talked to Trudeau on Wednesday night, he was unable to deny the report officially.

Goldstream Park Hit By Teen-Age Vandals

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A wave of teen-age vandalism has hit Goldstream provincial park since the start of the spring school break.

"I just wish parents would visit their teen-age childdren," park warden Les Ledson told the Times. "I'm certain some of them would get a shock."

Some teen-agers, he said, including girls, have been kicked out of the park after being found "drunk and disorderly."

Ledson said about 125 teen-agers have been camping in the park since the break started.

He said trees have been chopped down and de-barked.

Campsite tables have been hacked up for firewood.

Tables have been carved and jabbed with knives.

Ledson has also seized a .22-calibre rifle as well as an air pistol, an air rifle and a machete.

"The strange thing is that Goldstream seems to be the only park where we have problems," Ledson said.

Ledson said he was concerned to find teen-agers with guns in their possession.

"Air pellet guns can be lethal," he said. "Some of the pellets were flying precariously close to two girls walking down the road. We seized the air rifle. The boy said he was firing at a garbage can."

Ledson said it is unlawful for any person under 18 years to be carrying any firearm, including air guns, unless accompanied by an adult.

No firearms are allowed in provincial parks, in any event, he added.

RCMP were called when a youth was found with the .22 rifle, but no charge was laid at Ledson's request.

Ledson said only education will solve the vandalism problem.

"Some young people don't know how to relate once they are in a wilderness atmosphere," he said. "They hack at trees with axes. They think once they are away from the city, they are at liberty to do anything."

He said most young people will listen to reason, but it is "pretty hard" to get through to them.

"They were boozed up with liquor," he said.

He said any liquor found around campsites is seized.

"We just take the beer away," he said. "Teen-agers won't claim it because they are under age.

"Some kids tell me that I pick on teen-agers," Ledson said.

"All I'm trying to do is to prevent them from hurting themselves and others when they are under the influence of liquor."

Carter Sticks to Plan

WASHINGTON (WP)—President Carter, attempting to seize the political initiative in the wake of another deadlock in strategic arms limitations talks, said Wednesday he will "hang tough" in pressing the Soviet Union to accept one of the American proposals that were rejected in Moscow.

However the president insisted that he was neither surprised nor discouraged that the initial attempt to reach agreement on sweeping reduction in nuclear arms had failed. Moreover, he added, he found it "very encouraging" that the Soviets agreed to continue the negotiations with a new round of talks scheduled for May in Geneva.

The president said the Russians insisted that the Nixon and Ford administrations had agreed not to deploy the American Cruise missile. This, he said, was the major stumbling block preventing agreement on the more modest of the two U.S. proposals — to have the two countries simply ratify the nuclear arms levels set in the 1972 Vladivostok agreement.

Carter said he rejects this contention — and is supported in this by both former president Ford and former secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger — and will continue to seek agreement on the main American proposal, which calls for "substantial reductions" in strategic nuclear weapons, a ban on deployment of new nuclear weapons system and to limit missile test firings.

But in response to a question, the president also warned that lack of any progress during the May talks in Geneva could force the United States to step up new weapons development.

"Obviously, if we feel at the conclusion of (the May)discussions that the Soviets are not acting in good faith with us and that an agreement is unlikely, then I would be forced to consider a much more deep commitment to the development and deployment of additional weapons," he said.

"But I would like to forego that decision until I am convinced the Soviets are not acting in good faith," he added.

Oscar Pays for Holiday

They had just decided to cancel a California trip this summer to save up enough to put down on a new house.

Then the word came Wednesday.

"This is wonderful, just wonderful," Jorgensen said when the announcement was made.

"We will have our holiday after all. This is exactly what we needed. Our luck seems to be continuing."

Jorgensen was referring to the $250,000 prize he shared with the rest of the Victoria police force in 1976. That cash is all held in trust and is paid out only when a policeman leaves or retires. In the early years the payment is $100 per year so as a four-year man Jorgensen's entitlement so far is $400, if he were to leave.

★

"In addition to that, I have gone in with four friends into Loto-Canada and we have won several small prizes — enough to keep us going. It seems to be our lucky year."

His luck continued in the Academy Award contest when, in addition to winning the grand prize, he won a minor prize as well, a copy of Life Goes to the Movies.

The odds against one person winning two awards were phenomenal because there were more than 6,000 entries in all.

The drawing took place at the Capitol Theatre Wednesday afternoon where a crowd of 1,200 saw the premiere of Voyage of the Damned and picked up free bottles of perfume and loaves of bread.

Winners of the major runners-up awards, free dinner at The Empress and tickets to a Famous Players theatre, were:

These awards were drawn from among the 35 entries who had correctly predicted that Rocky, Faye Dunaway and Peter Finch would win the three major Oscars.

The book awards were selected from among the 6,000 other entries who had tried but missed on at least one Oscar.

BIG BERTHA GOES BACK TO SLEEP

SWANSEA, Wales (Reuter) — Big Bertha, the huge German bomb which activated itself after 37 years in the mud, went back to sleep again Wednesday.

The 2,200 pound bomb, believed to have been ditched by a Luftwaffe bomber while it was being pursued bya British Spitfire fighter in 1940, caused a scare in villages near Swansea airport Tuesday night when it suddenly began to tick.

But army bomb experts who approached Big Bertha Wednesday said the unexploded device was quiet now.

The bomb was discovered near the airport several months ago but was thought to be safe.

The army hopes to defuse the weapon today but has told villagers that even if Big Bertha explodes the blast will not be dangerous to them.

Canada Blasts Apartheid Policy

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada made a devastating attack Wednesday on South Africa's racial policies of apartheid that won praise from the African National Congress as well as Western and African countries.

Canadian ambassador William Barton devoted a major part of his speech in the UN Security Council to apartheid and the growing repression it has brought to South Africa. He condemned the jailing of thousands of blacks and others in the wake of racial unrest that has cost hundreds of lives since last June.

For 300 years, people of different origins in South Africa have been sharing a large and prosperous land but have not been sharing the privileges and obligations of common citizenship in an equitable manner, Barton told the council during debate on the South African question.

The South African system is cruel and demeaning for the great majority of black Africans and other non-whites.

The apartheid laws prescribe which jobs they may hold, on which level, and what salary; where they may live, whether they must live separated from their families; with whom they may meet, and in what circumstances.

A development of apartheid is the policy of "Bantustanization." All UN members have rejected the so-called independence of the Transkei, the first offspring of the "Bantustan" system.

"We have done so because it purports to present as self-determination a system which allocates to 80 per cent of the population of South Africa rights in only 13 per cent of that territory," Barton said.

Frequently the territory allocated to the blacks is poor and incapable of being developed.

Barton said the killings at Sharpeville 17 years ago, when 67 died, and last year at Soweto, outside Johannesburg, where at least 400 were killed, reflects the profound discontent and frustration of the majority, and their determination to obtain the justice which they have been so long denied.

Barton drew attention to South Africa's statement in the council in October, 1974, that it was the intention of the South African government to do away with discrimination on a racial basis.

"We have waited in vain for meaningful action. Some minor changes have taken place, and they must be welcomed, but only to the extent that they presage a change of mentality within the South African government.

"It has remained evident, however, that in reality no effort is being made to begin dismantling apartheid or removing from it even its harshest and more repressive aspects. To the contrary, the government has continued to add to the body of repressive legislation which supports the system."

METAL SHOPS STRUCK

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 1,800 members of the United Steelworkers of America went on strike at 10 Vancouver area metal shops Wednesday to back demands for a new contract.

A union spokesman said there are no plans to close 30 other operations.

The shops, represented by the Metal Industries Association, have served lockout notice on the union but have not announced whether they will proceed.

Zaire Admits Town Is Lost

KINSHASA (AP) — President Mobutu Sese Seko's government admitted for the first time today the loss of the strategic town of Mutshatsha to Katangan invaders who have taken about a third of Shaba province in southern Zaire.

The government was rushing reinforcements to defend Kolwezi, the centre of the copper mines that earn 60 per cent of Zaire's export income. Gen. Boyenge Singa was named to command the hard-pressed Zaire army in Shaba.

Mutshatsha, 60 miles west of Kolwezi, was reported captured Saturday by rebels who invaded their native province from Angola on March 8. But the Kinshasa authorities denied the fall of the town until today.

The former operational commander of the Kolwezi sector, Col. Eluki Mongo Aundu, told a news conference the forward rebel positions were 50 miles west of Kolwezi, placing them 10 miles past Mutshatsha.

Diplomats and other sources said the Katangans had advanced to within 30 miles of Kolwezi. Shaba was formerly known as Katanga province.

"The situation in Kolwezi is completely calm and there is no sign of panic among the population," Eluki said.

He said there are about 5,000 rebels equipped with Sovietmade mortars, rocket launchers and surface to surface missiles. He had brought up reinforcements from Angola in transport planes that landed at the rebelheld airstrips of Kisenge and Kabana.

"These airstrips have now been rendered unusable by bombardment of our air force," Eluki said.

Diplomats and other sources have estimated the number of invaders at 2,000.

Eluki repeated assertions that the rebels were led by white mercenaries who were either Portuguese or Cubans. Angola's Marxist rulers had help from Cuban troops in winning the civil war that followed that country's independence from Portugal.

The regulations end the segregation of corked domestic wines from their foreign counterparts and allow both to be displayed on the same shelves.

Wineries will be allowed to take tours through their premises which can include a sampling of the product.

Retail outlets for wine are also allowed in the winery.

Local wine industry pamphlets will be available in liquor stores and wineries will be able to set up store displays of new brands.

Mair said he has no apology for trying to help B.C. wineries and grape growers, and said even wine-sophisticated countries as France have had to protect their local products against foreigners.

Mair said a major educational and advertising campaign will also be launched to encourage better drinking habits.

Neighborhood pub sites will be subject to pre-clearance from the government before the promoter seeks support from the local community or municipal government.

Mair said this is to avoid a proliferation of pubs in one area and a lack of them in another.

No Proposal On Wells —Cumming

The chairman of the Saanich Peninsula Water Commission said today no proposal to drill deep water wells has been forwarded to his group.

Jim Cumming was responding to comments from Murray Keating, general manager of Ken's Drilling Ltd. in Langford, who said Wednesday his company and a Vancouver firm had proposed deep water drilling as at least an interim method of meeting chronic water shortages on the north end of the peninsula.

Keating said five deep wells would probably cost about $500,000, in contrast to the $5 to $10 million for the pipeline up the peninsula planned by the water commission.

that is not being offered by the public school system.

Dr. John Waller, president of the B.C. Federation of Independent Schools, said Wednesday he was basically happy with the legislation "at first look."

He said the independent schools convention which starts today in Richmond will have a closer look at the bill.

The provisions in the act which would make the independent schools more accountable than they have been before does not mean giving up their independence, Waller said.

"The amount of control (in the act) is minimal but realistic," Waller said. "It is asking us to be accountable which is something we've always wanted to be. "It gives us the maximum opportunity for variation."

the weather

Residents of most central Interior communities awoke to find a dusting of fresh snow this morning. A weak weather disturbance crossing B.C. will head southeastward towards the Kootenays spreading showers to southern sections of the Interior later today. The coast meanwhile can expect mostly cloudy skies today with a few showers mainly over nothern sections.

A massive high pressure area in the eastern Pacific continues to build northward towards Alaska. The high pressure area should effectively shut off the flow of Pacific weather systems. A mixture of cloud and sun is in store for most B.C. communities on the weekend.

It's for you to decide.
Do you want to save gas . . . or waste gas?
The choice is easy. And so is your choice of medium-duty trucks.
Only the International Loadstar and Cargostar have MV 404-446 V8 gas engines with emission control as part of their basic design. They clean up the air without cleaning out your wallet.
Even if gas was free and plentiful, there are lots more reasons to choose International. Road test a gas saver for maneuverability, and you'll know one of the reasons.
The cab-over Cargostar was born and bred for city traffic, narrow lanes, and congested loading docks.
There's a Loadstar or Cargostar designed to save gas on every medium-duty job. Learn more about them at your IH truck dealer.

'Foot-Slogging Gains' On Languages—Spicer

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Keith Spicer, in his sixth and last annual report, says the government's official languages policy seems to be getting back on the rails.

The official languages commissioner insists there have been "undeniable, fundamental, foot-slogging gains for the dignity of both Canada's language communities."

The most striking gain is in technical jobs — where 13 per cent now are French speakers — an 86 per cent increase since 1971.

The report proposes creation of a Ministry of Language Equality, headed by the prime minister.

The ministry would group all central policy-making and monitoring in a single agency.

Spicer suggested the new department after making a direct appeal to the prime minister to give the bilingualism program more attention.

He says the PM's "personal authority and interest badly need to be felt more regularly in the ranks."

The commissioner stresses the "more sensitive work of refinement, consolidation and sustaining inspiration will require attention from the top."

Spicer says the federal effort on the youth priority language training plan be proposed a year ago "is far from non-existent."

But, he claims, it is still not enough, and "many ideas need exploring to extend exchanges each year to something like 75,000 or 100,000 young people, and language-learning opportunities to many million more of all ages."

Spicer even goes so far as to suggest the government subsidize a program where travel companies could offer every adult one yearly return trip anywhere in Canada for $100. Every child could make the same trip for $50.

As an alternative suggestion, the report proposes each citizen be allowed to deduct from his income tax 60 to 80 per cent of any return ticket used during annual holidays.

The proposals cover service in a second language wherever there is significant demand, stronger language of work opportunities and broader access for journalists and public to simultaneous interpretation in the Supreme Court of Canada and the Federal Court of Canada.

The commissioner believes a great majority of citizens are still willing to support any reasonable applicatioon of the principle of linguistic equality "if only public authorities would explain frankly and meaningfully the practical impact of their policies."

He goes on to contend the government's "reckless squandering of goodwill may sooner or later cost our language reform its vital, and newly fragile, popular support."

Spicer again skewered the three biggest federal Crown corporations — Air Canada, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and Canadian National Railways.

As far as Air Canada is concerned, its approach to bilingualism has been "fearful, defensive and negative" and it was "no wonder so many of its employees seem to have the impression that respecting the official language preferences of paying passengers . . . is not a high priority."

Nothing that his office made about 60 recommendations between 1970 and 1976, Spicer said the national airline has made little headway.

The CBC, already the subject of a government study, was accused of "not looking actively enough for ways to solve some of the problems" pointed out by Spicer in previous reports.

"This office sympathizes with the CBC's plea that the lack of resources time, money and manpower forces on the corporation a different order of priorities, but we must underline the urgent need for many concrete steps to solve most of the nuts-and-bolts problems."

The CBC has millions of viewers every year but only 26 filed complaints with Spicer about such things as poor TV and radio reception, unilingual English identifications and signs, as well as technicians being "allegedly obliged to work in the producer's language."

Then there were the howls about hockey broadcasts, notably those about commentators "murdering" French-Canadian players names.

"Confusing Houle and Hull is bad enough," Spicer noted. "But how would they like it in Parry Sound if we added an aspirate 'h' to Bobby Orr?"

CN was damned with faint praise. The official languages commissioner said that on the whole the corporation's performance was fairly satisfactory last year.

The 26 complaints he handled concerned such things as lack of service in French in Jasper, Alta., a lack of English newspapers on the Toronto-Ottawa run and work manuals available in English only in Montreal...

QUE. DELAY ON LANGUAGE

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — The Quebec government's white paper on the controversial language issue will be released Friday, two days later than planned, to allow the cabinet time to discuss its finer points.

The white paper will be followed by a language bill, Bill 1, the charter for a French Quebec, which will be presented to the National Assembly after the Easter recess.

The document made public Friday will be the official French version. Texts in at least three other languages, including English, are also being prepared. But a spokesman said these may not be ready by Friday because of printing problems.

The new language legislation was expected to detail regulations under which children could attend English schools in Quebec. It could require one or both parents to have been educated in English schools in Canada for a child to enter the English-language school system.

It was also expected to set out the government guidelines for making French the official language of work in the province.

Probable features of the bill will be regulations requiring Quebec companies dealing with the government to have top level Francophone personnel, and all businesses to have some personnel able to speak French.

Unity Debate Soon?

OTTAWA (CP) — Government House Leader Allan MacEachen opened the possibility Wednesday of full parliamentary discussion of national unity some time after the Easter break.

Expressing concern about the seeming inability of the Commons to focus on the issue, MacEachen told the Commons he believed "it would be not only desirable but crucial for members of the House of Commons to have an opportunity at an early date to deal with and discuss the various facets of this issue."

Air Controllers Right—Prober

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE, Canary Islands (AP) — The Spanish air controllers at Santa Cruz airport followed proper procedure and gave instructions in correct English to the KLM and Pan American airliners that collided on the runway four days ago, says one of the investigators seeking the cause of aviation's worst disaster.

The two controllers who were on duty Sunday were interviewed Wednesday by U.S. and Dutch investigators.

Authorities said the cockpit recorders from both of the Boeing 747 Jumbo jets were being flown to Washington for analysis in the presence of KLM and Pan Am personnel who could identify the voices.

It was hoped the tapes could answer two big questions about the crash — why the KLM pilot began his takeoff run without permission and whether the Pan Am jet should have still been on the runaway when the Dutch plane crashed into it.

The KLM pilot was Capt. Z. A. Veldhuizen van Zanten, 51, one of the airline's most experienced fliers, and KLM has said it was "completely illogical and unthinkable" that he would take off without clearance.

But the chief Dutch investigator, Franz van Rejsen, said the control tower's tape of its instructions showed van Zanten did just that. Spanish officials said the tower's last instructions to the KLM pilot were: "Okay, stand by. I will call you for takeoff."

The Pan Am plane was still taxiing up the main runway to get into position for takeoff behind the KLM jet.

Van Rejsen maintained that the Pan Am plane passed an exit called C-3 at which it had been ordered to turn off onto a parallel taxiway and was proceeding to the next exit, C-4. Americans said the Pan Am pilot was following instructions and the C-3 exit was at an angle impossible for a 747 to turn into.

The Pan Am jet, piloted by Capt. Victor Grubbs of Centerport, N.Y., was just short of C-4 when the KLM jet began its takeoff run. Grubbs tried to get his plane off the runaway, but the Dutch jet smashed into it at a 45-degree angle.

The investigators said the cockpit tapes may show whether some messages failed to get through or were misinterpreted.

500 Indians To Gather

FORT FRANKLIN, N.W.T. (CP) — The Dene Assembly of the Northwest Territories plans to bring 500 Indians to a tent city in northern Alberta in June to "settle once and for all" the land claims of the territories Metis Association.

Hugh McCullum, spokesman for the N.W.T. Indian Brotherhood, said the action was approved by the assembly in a resolution Wednesday.

Right To Vote Challenged By Lauk

NDP MLA Gary Lauk Wednesday challenged the right of 10 Socred MLAs and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson to vote on legislation which would eliminate succession duties.

Lauk (Vancouver Centre) said the 11 MLAs, who voted in favor of the repeal of the succession duties during second reading of the bill, have a direct financial interest because of their personal wealth or that of their families, and should have been disqualified from the vote.

Speaker Ed Smith ruled Lauk's motion out of order, saying that to disqualify a member from voting because of a personal gain from legislation, that gain had to be "immediate and personal."

Lauk said outside the house at the close of the afternoon sitting that while the Speaker's ruling was probably "strictly correct, it would have been the honorable thing for them to withdraw from voting on the bill."

The legislation would repeal the succession duty which is a tax on the estate of a deceased person. An estate would have to be worth more than about $300,000 before the tax would apply.

Lauk said the following would fall into that category: Premier Bill Bennett, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe (who introduced the bill), Human Resources Minsiter Bill Vander Zalm, Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair, Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, Dewdney MLA George Mussallem, Gerry Strongman (Vancouver South), Stephen Rogers (Vancouver South), George Haddad (Kootenay) and Liberal leader Gibson.

Lauk also included Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy and Socred MLA Ray Loewen (Burnaby-Edmonds) on his original list but struck their names off because they were absent when the vote was taken.

At one point during the discussions on whether Lauk's motion was in order, the premier said he had been "contemplating" for some time including all NDP MLAs in his will — which would presumably also make them stand to gain financially from the bill.

NDP house leader Bill King declined Bennett's offer on behalf of all NDP MLAs.

He said he thought the premier should spread around his "excess wealth" by leaving some of it to the people of B.C. through succession duties.

The bill passed second reading stage, approval in principle, by a vote of 30-18.

Charge Stayed

NANAIMO (CP) — The Crown has entered a stay of proceedings of an extortion charge against Jerry Mosure, 22, of Parksville who was accused of making telephoned threats between Sept. 23 and Oct. 2 to Genevieve Brown demanding $50,000.

More School Programs

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's education department plans more programs for students who misbehave and for students who want to accelerate faster than the curriculum necessitates, Education Minister Pat McGeer said Wednesday.

McGeer, in a speech to 800 teachers attending the annual convention of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, was not specific about programs for undisciplined pupils, but said teachers must help the government develop alternative programs for such students.

"Although suspension will permit people who do not want to co-operate to be removed from the classroom," McGeer said, "It is still the responsibility of the school to provide educational programs for those between the ages of seven and 15.

"We will be looking to you, the teachers of British Columbia, to assist us in developing new programs for those young people who are unable to perform in the classroom."

The minister said three pilot projects are being organized for ambitious grade 11 and 12 students. They are:

—Extended opportunities for pre-apprenticeship training in high school;

—Career courses that will also give high school graduates advanced standing in college career programs;

—The possibility for recognition of advanced academic achievement, as yet unspecified.

The ministry has also sponsored a study on learning disabilities to see what programs are needed, McGeer said.

He also confirmed that the core curriculum will come into effect in September, adding that the courses contained in it are almost the same as those now being taught.

"However, where there has been considerable discretion in curriculum guides, parts will now be designated as essential."

Later, the minister said: "We must above all return rigor to the system. Rigor produces a climate of effort and pride.

"That is our challenge — to produce a system which stimulates all our students to perform at the limits of their capacity."

Take Two Aspirins

Never have we been happier eating our words than today, reporting that widespread fears about the dismantling of pharmacare for the elderly were groundless. We are happy to give prominence to Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm's solemn promise that his new reorganized prescription drug scheme will not involve any additional costs the aged are not paying now.

The rumors about what Vander Zalm was planning to do to pharmacare were getting ominous, along the lines of making the elderly pay for their drugs, up to a deductible amount, then forwarding receipts above that amount to Victoria for reimbursement.

He says that those over 65 will not be subject to a deductible clause. Reports from pharmacists had hinted at a $75 deductible amount for most people, and $25 for the elderly. That's one odious "reform" of pharmacare that has been laid to rest, thank goodness.

Some doubts linger on, however. With every promise, Vander Zalm raises more questions about the new pharmacare plan. He said last weekend in Vancouver that B.C.'s 50,000 diabetics and 2,200 epileptics who need expensive prescription drugs will be covered under his plan. Using the figures he provided, to bring under pharmacare's umbrella just these two groups will cost some $10 million.

The plan during 1976-77 when just the elderly, handicapped and those on welfare were covered cost $24.6 million. Logically, to add diabetics and epileptics, one would think the government would have budgeted at least $35 million for the 1977-78 fiscal year. Not so — the budget gives pharmacare only $26 million, barely enough to cover inflation and population increase.

How then will pharmacare be made universal, including everyone now covered, plus diabetics, epileptics and others while costing the government barely any more money?

It's the $1.4 million question to which British Columbians will have the solution next month from Vander Zalm himself. There are only two possible solutions — either reduce the number of people now covered (and the minister has ruled out that alternative) or soak everybody for a pharmacare premium, as we all now pay medicare premiums. Five dollars a month from every family in B.C. would raise about $30 million a year.

If the second method is the government's definition of "universal" pharmacare, then most people would probably opt out, thank you very much.

There is a third possibility, which Vander Zalm seems to be hinting at. Last week in the legislature he made an incredible speech on the wastage of prescription drugs and the use of pharmacare to buy ordinary patent medicines and over-the-counter items which cost the government twice the retail price because of the pharmacare dispensing fee paid to the pharmacists.

No one could condone such misuse of a prescription drug program, but if pharmacare is the only way some elderly can afford these non-prescription but nonetheless necessary health aids, then who will deny them?

The government could considerably reduce the cost of prescription drugs if it went into a program of bulk-buying by generic name, instead of the fancy high-priced trademark brands.

But the Social Credit government take on the multinational drug companies and the free enterprise drugstore chains that fill most drug prescriptions? Not likely.

The kind of cost-cutting measure the minister envisions were best illustrated by his speech in the legislature on Friday. All-Bran and commercial laxatives were tested side by side at Lion's Gate hospital on 90 elderly patients, he told MLAs. and the famous cereal was not only much, much cheaper but it produced more bowel movements to the pound. Two-tenths of a cent per "dose" versus seven for the laxative.

If this is an example of Vander Zalm's plans to save money and introduce a cheaper universal pharmacare scheme, then expect your doctors to start prescribing a new type of medication. "Take two aspirins and call Mr. Vander Zalm in the morning . . ."

Cuba Si

It's taken 16 years, but last week Cuban and American diplomats sat down in New York and began discussions on a pact to govern relations between the U.S. and Cuba on fishing in waters of the Caribbean which both share.

That wasn't the first time the wall of silence has been broken down, but the first time that negotiations have been acknowledged publicly. Through 1974 and 1975 there were high level talks to define all the issues separating the two nations, but they were not disclosed until this week. A seige mentality has dominated U.S.-Cuba affairs since the Americans broke diplomatic relations in 1961.

Only 90 miles of water (the distance between Victoria and Vancouver. say) separate the tip of Florida and the beaches of Cuba, but since Fidel Castro's revolution of 1959 they have bristled with patrol boats, airplane hijackings, secret invasions and petty acts of terrorism. If Spanish-speaking President Jimmy Carter can bring Cuba-U.S. relations back to peaceful reality, it will be a feat approaching his predecessor's "normalization" of American China policy.

It's about time.

". . . here it is on page seven . . . 'tenants must not hurl (or cause to be hurled) landlords from a balcony higher than 30 feet from the ground, or two storeys (whichever is higher)' . . ."

RICHARD GWYN

Maggie and Pierre, Part II

TORONTO — "I wouldn't mind at all," said Prime Minister Trudeau in a comment relayed by a spokesman. "I would be neither surprised nor dismayed if she (Margaret Trudeau) develops a career that might require her to be away from Ottawa for periods of time. I would never try to force her to be the official hostess, nor expect her to attend conventions like this one (the Liberal policy meeting in Toronto). In this there is nothing new. She did not, during the first two years after our marriage, play any official role."

Trudeau thus has made it official: Margaret Trudeau will build for herself a career, as a photographer, that may take her away from Ottawa for weeks and perhaps months at a time. She will as a consequence, abandon for the forseeable future her present career as the "official wife" of the prime minister.

Looked Elsewhere

The reticence of the Canadian media about what's going on between the Trudeaus is beginning to resemble that of the British press in 1936 during the affair between King Edward VIII and Mrs. Wallis Simpson that resulted in the king's abdication. For months, American newspapers chronicled the social appearances of the king and Mrs. Simpson while English newspapers — aware of what was going on because their editors read the American press—resolutely looked the other way.

Most of the credit for this discretion is due, I believe, to public opinion. No matter how much they themselves may speculate in private about what's going on at 24 Sussex Drive, Canadians just will not stand to see the private life of their prime minister and his wife splattered across the front pages. Without being excessively chauvinistic about it, a quintessentially Canadian sense of the limits of good taste has protected the Trudeaus from public innuendo and gossip. In a more subtle sense, many, many wives would love to achieve the "freedom" that Margaret is seeking.

Yet it's absurd and nambypamby to pretend that the entire affair is a private matter. Public interest comes into play at the point at which the public performance of the prime minister is being affected.

Already, this is happening. It's a public, not private, fact that because of the state of his relations with Margaret, Trudeau has cancelled a planned political visit to British Columbia in the first week of April and almost certainly will also cancel a long-scheduled, four-day swing across the prairies in mid-April.

The political effect of these decisions is that Trudeau will delay his attempt to learn, at first hand, some of the causes of Western alienation.

Another fact, otherwise just interesting gossip but now of political significance, is that Margaret has encountered some initial success in her attempt to develop an independent career. This week, Margaret negotiated with People magazine of New York a $200-a-day photographic assignment to be carried out in late April. She is undertaking a similar freelance assignment for the New York Times to photograph the Canadian National Ballet stars, Frank Agustyn and Karen Kain.

Margaret's talents as a photographer, if the samples published in People are a fair test, won't make her a media star. Her access — "it's fantastic," says a People editor — may do it for her, as it has for film-star-turned-photographer Candice Bergen. As one example: Included in Margaret's portfolio of photographs are shots of Trudeau and King Hussein of Jordan riding motorcycles in the desert, wearing sweat shirts that say, "Hussein's Angels."

By improving her skills as a photographer and by exploiting her access to the international newsmakers, Margaret Trudeau quite likely can achieve for herself an independent career. If this happens, she will quite certainly have to abandon her career as "official wife" of the prime minister. For one thing, she may be away from Ottawa for long periods. For another, she will be trapped by conflicts of interest.

Bachelor Again

This already has happened. Commercial photographers in Ottawa are outraged, legitimately, that Margaret was able to photograph Agustyn and Kain from the wings of the National Arts Centre while they performed on the stage, a privilege denied to others.

Trudeau's statement draws the affair to a public close. Margaret Trudeau most probably will develop her own career. She will as a consequence no longer be the prime minister's public wife. In his political and ceremonial roles, Trudeau will be once again a bachelor.

How this happened and why is nobody's business — not the public's, nor the media's, not yours, nor mine. End of the publicity.

Just one problem remains. To succeed as a photographer of the jet set, Margaret Trudeau will need all the publicity she can get, or can stage-manage.

French Dash

Once upon a time, that is, two days after Christmas 1852, there was two feet of snow in Victoria. A wedding had been arranged, at an unexpectedly early date. Very soon the bride's father, Governor James Douglas, would embark with the Voltigeurs for the Cowichan expedition, and he wished to ensure that his eldest daughter, Cecilia, and the rest of his family, would have a protector should the worst happen.

Forty years later the pioneer doctor, J. S. Helmcken, writing his memoirs in that house now near Heritage Court, remembered the morning of his wedding day. High noon approached and the governor's carriage was unable to get through the snow from the fort to James Bay to fetch the bride and bridesmaids. It was the coachman, "a French-Canadian gentleman, full of resource," who saved the day. He sent for a drygoods box, cut off the top, put in a seat and threw over it some scarlet cloth, presumably a Hudson's Bay blanket. Out of willows growing nearby he cut shaft and runners in one, fixed the box on them, harnessed the horse, and in a jingle of sligh-bells brought the pretty bride to the church on time. With warmth Dr. Helmcken recalled him: "Charley was a spendid fellow — a rushing active spirited lithesome and blithesome fellow — a Canadian, at home with a canoe and horses — a sort of typical Canadian young man — with a French dash in him."

The social history of early Fort Victoria will include this episode, continuing to delight young and old. It will also no doubt include analyses relevant to our present preoccupation with the French fact, bilingualism and even multiculturalism. But perhaps those first newcomers to this place would not recognize under these ponderous lables what they knew as the custom of the country.

Surely in the present struggle to bring about the future which belongs to us, what is required first is the quietest revolution of all, that which takes place in the mind and heart. In this city General Vanier, that good man, once expressed his faith that the great hope for Canada is in unity through understanding between the English- and French-speaking members of the community, especially in exchanges between the young. The joyful civic celebration of Victoria Day, which began in the strength of the imperial past, should surely never have absent from it here a salute from beautiful British Columbia to la belle province.—Margaret Carson, 407-890 Academy Close.

I join Patricia Illingworth (Times, March 18) in her boycott of milk packaged in plastic bags.

What has happened to our conservation of natural resources if we use up our precious petroleum to make plastic bags while our forest industry lacks markets for forest products?

If we can have one- and two-litre cardboard cartons of milk, what on earth is the sane reasoning behind using four plastic bags in place of one cardboard container? I have heard nothing but complaints and curses from friends and store clerks alike, about clumsy and leaking bags. It made me wince every time I threw an empty heavy duty plastic bag into the incinerator. Such a waste! The smoke fouled the air, the burned residue left no benefits to the ash which was distributed on my garden. It is not practical to wash every bag for re-use, especially 12 or more a week. The three-quart cardboard containers were perfect kitchen compost collectors, among other uses, and burned cleanly.

Instead of serving half two per cent milk and half powdered skim milk, I now serve straight powdered skim milk, and none of my three children have voiced any recognition of the change. I myself quite enjoy powdered skim milk as a pick-me-up snack, and we will all continue to do so until cardboard comes back. — Heather Edwards, 584 Victoria Avenue.

Curious Gentleman

Who is this curious gentleman, who publishes a collection of essays before he is elected prime minister, stating very clearly his political intentions, and today, as prime minister, expects me to believe that he sincerely has the interests of all Canadians at heart?

Who is this strange political animal, re-elected by the people's confidence on the basis of an "anit-control" platform, who six months later imposes the exact economic controls that he campaigned against, on the people that supported him?

Who is this millionaire hypocrite, who casts the blame of economic doom on the "highliving" people of the land, while he comfortably meditates on that same problem, beside his new swimming pool? (let them eat cake!)

If he hides behind his slick rhetoric to justify the meaning of his statements, I would remind him that our country's problems are not rhetorical!

If he insists that people change and that their needs change too, I would tell him that our country needs, now more than ever, an enlightened leader — someone with foresight!

And if he adds to this, that the country's problems are complex and that there are no simple solutions, I would have him question both his ability and responsibility, in reference to the highest office of the land!

Mencius said: "The disease of men is to neglect their own fields and go to weeding those of others, to exact much from others and lay light burdens on themselves . . . a man must first despise himself, then others will despise him." — Don M. Mitchell, 828 Devonshire Road.

Forgotten

The letter from your correspondent Justice (Times March 22) was no doubt well-intended but was erroneous on several points.

Justice is mistaken in believing that all who furthered the Nazi cause (1939-1945) hailed from Germany, as many thousands of SS troops were recruited from other European countries, including large numbers from Holland.

Also incorrect is Justice's statement that Mr. Vander Zalm and his parents suffered in Holland during the war for although it's undeniable that little Willie's formative years were spent under the Nazi administration his father got out before the hostilities started and was safe in Canada during the war — already setting up what was to become a million-dollar tulip empire.

The title chosen for Justice's letter Their Own Fault was apt, for many of B.C.'s handicapped are in that unfortunate predicament by losing limbs and receiving other crippling injuries after volunteering to go overseas and fight for the freedom of others. "Their own fault" it may be but where would the people of occupied Europe be today had it not been for those brave Canucks, who instead of staying home and starting lucrative businesses for their dependents, had the fortitude to go abroad and risk their lives in situations which often made them heroes but never made them millionaires?

Today their glory is long-forgotten, even by the ones they liberated, and instead of being treated as handicapped heroes are generally regarded by human resources departments as an unwarranted drain on the public purse. — Injustice.

Pensions

I quote from a reader's letter letter headed Their Own Fault and signed Justice: "I myself am a pensioner in the poverty bracket income, but never, even in the 1930s, depended upon the government for help." Pray tell, what is a pension other than government help?—B. Waldner, Victoria.

Good Work

I am prompted to write to you after reading the very lucid and informative article (Lesbians and Others) by E. D. Ward-Harris in the books section of the Times March 26.

Mr. Ward-Harris severely disparages Ronald Pearsall's book, Public Purity, Private Shame and clearly gives his reasons for so doing. The book deals with the exposure of Victorian sexual hypocrisy, which is only now being very reluctantly disclosed.

But Mr. Ward-Harris in his article went much further. He gave your readers a most interesting, informative and revealing essay on the private lives of some of the literary giants of the last 70 years. These revelations were not publicly disclosed during the lives of these literary figures and the disclosures may come as a bit of a shock to their many worshippers.

The books section of your weekend issue is one of the highspots of the newspaper and reminds me very much of the articles which we used to read in T.P.'s Weekly of old, and in the present day Times Literary Supplement. Long may it continue. — Albert Williams, 2456 Camelot Road.

Why?

I thought at this time that I would bring to the attention of all the readers who hire youths for summer jobs this little bit of information.

I, as well as many other youths, have found that in the past years some employers have taken university students over the high school or non-students. It appears that there is some prejudice in their choice of hiring.

A youth with the same qualifications for a job as a university student tends to lose the job to the university student. Now in my opinion, this is prejudice, however slight, on the part of the employer.

I just have one question to ask. Why? If a job is suppose to have equal opportunities, why doesn't it? — A Job Hunting Youth.

Irresponsible

I would like to commend the president of the Shipbuilders Union for his efforts in making the Yarrow Shipbuilders employees the highest-paid shipbuilding workers in the world. Unfortunately while doing this he also priced the workers out of a job and it now appears Yarrows shipyard will close and the financial support Yarrows gave to the local economy when they were operating will disappear.

With the help of their leader, the International Woodworkers of America will soon be in the same position. IWA leader Jack Munro's 1977 demands for a 30 per cent wage increase is a prime example. Such a demand when the economy is at such a low ebb and British Columbia lumber is practically priced out of the world market could only be made by a irresponsible and egotistical leader.

My suggestion to the members of the IWA union would be for them to insist that their leader take a course in economics, starting with nursery rhymes, especially the ones about the goose that laid the golden egg. — G. W. Frost, Sooke.

The Great Non-Issue . . . Protesting the Seal Hunt

By MIKE HALLERAN

Halleran, a CBC producer on environmental affairs, wrote this article for the Vancouver Sun.

Perhaps the society is actually rebelling against the wrong things. The fact is that all the doings of an industrial nation are in conflict with wildlife circumstance and have been since the first white man walked the land.

The consumer society we all enjoy is by definition guilty of the most horrible examples of ecological rip-off. Now its members have been given a way to bathe in the conscience-healing balm of one great non-issue. And Greenpeace has given it to them.

The issue has been promoted by Greenpeace. Greenpeace has set planned and deliberate traps for the media, and the media have been sucked in. And the insecure and guilt-ridden public has been sucked in too.

If the Greenpeace seal campaign served to broaden the public's awareness of declining environmental values it might, as a tactical process, be forgivable. But there are no signs of that.

Seals Far Away

The seals are far away. Stopping the hunt will not affect the life-style of a single person in B.C. It will not slow the traffic on Georgia Street or alter the social destiny of this province by the breadth of one hair. It is, in short, the easiest kind of eco-campaign to get support for . . . one which costs us absolutely nothing.

In their heroic and justified sensationalizing of the whale over-kill, Greenpeace made friends and influenced people. They behaved responsibly. They won trust, and moral as well as financial support.

But the issues are not the same. Their seal campaign raises questions of social morality which they have declined to answer or simply ignored.

Multiple-choice questions are the easiest to answer. We all remember that from our high school days. So here's a multiple choice question for Greenpeace: draw a circle around "a" or "b". Is your objective to (a), end cruelty to animals or (b) to achieve balanced management of seal stocks?

If you answer "a" then you are in effect saying that seals mean no more to you than any other animal and that no other animal means any less.

If you answer "b" then you are saying that you know for an absolute fact that the present hunting level is endangering the species and the scientists who say otherwise are lying.

The issue is so charged with emotion, so overheated and irrational that logical debate is likely not possible. But still we must try. So, since Greenpeace, the self-styled seal experts (from B.C.) claim the Atlantic seal populations cannot support a commercial harvest we must do an inventory.

We have to have an extensive and expensive count, and while it is going on, employ scrutineers to keep it honest.

The scrutineers should include members of Greenpeace and some seal fishermen. I suggest Dr. Pat Moore of Greenpeace would be appropriate since he is an excellent and committed marine biologist and presumably no one would be able to snow him.

If there's a shortage of funds, perhaps some of the well-heeled dabblers in this bizarre scenario could kick in enough to pay for a little helicopter time.

Now we have that out of the way, let's look at some of the ramifications if Greenpeace should circle option "a" — ending cruelty to animals (which they wouldn't).

It would place them squarely in the role of deciding that one animal was more sacred than the other — that one case of animal cruelty is less offensive than this particular kind — that the death of seals is more disgraceful than the death of a timber wolf or a red-backed vole.

Bludgeon Killing

It would place them in the position of being opposed to the bludgeon killing of all animals including calves, lambs, goats, cows, hogs and so on. They would have to handcuff themselves to the bannisters of every slaughter house in Canada. Every farm, or private property where a home-owner kills his own meat.

Nor could this quest even fairly end with just killing. They would have to do something about the common (but unquestionably painful) business of branding baby calves and colts with a red hot iron.

Anybody who thinks that doesn't hurt them hasn't done very many. And speaking of hot irons, is Greenpeace (or anybody else) aware of the unmistakable signs of "firing" on the forelegs of a young racehorse?

The race tracks of the world quite regularly race thoroughbreds at age 2. Baby horses, really. (No rancher or outfitter would try and work a two-year-old horse and any veterinarian will tell you that at that age they have not even stopped growing.) So their leg muscles become separated from the bone and the firing iron is used to weld them back on. What for? For sport. For money. For the entertainment of the fans, that's what.

Even fishermen club their catch to death (after torturing it on a barbed hook for as long as it will struggle) and you don't have to go to Newfie to fight this sort of "barbarism." Hell no. There are a quarter of a million fishermen right here in B.C.

What About Dogs?

And what about dogs? Everybody likes dogs. So why not end cruelty to dogs? Make it illegal to keep them in apartments or for that matter in large cities. The Vancouver SPCA people will tell you how many thousands of abandoned dogs they gas every year.

The commercial is right. "All you add is love." I'm reminded of a "farmer" I once knew who turned an aged and dying workhorse out of his place because it could not work anymore and his religion forbade him to kill anything.

I have not been able to find a single verified case of an animal species being hunted to extinction.

The buffalo is the commonly raised one. Wrong. It wasn't the Sharps rifle that caused the disappearance of this animal from the great plains. It was another instrument of white civilization. It was the mold-board plow. Blocked migration routes and destruction of habitat put finish to the buffalo. Not William Cody and his cohorts.

Let's get closer to home. Perigrine falcons? They are classed as an endangered species in some parts (unlike seals). Not because of hunting, however, but because of the collecting of insecticide residues in their bodies as a result of their critical position in the food chain. Again, an environmental event. A degredation of habitat.

The Vancouver Island marmot? A most interesting animal. Unhunted, but declining rapidly in numbers — again because of habitat alteration by man.

The emotion and pathos of the seal-killing has missed a great biological truth: we cannot restore natural balance to the wildlife populations of this country unless we all leave. We're staying, so we have to manage.

We have to abandon the presumptuous and totally arrogant assumption that unless an animal product passes through a human gut it is somehow wasted.

Even in nature, animal populations fluctuate up and down like a yo yo. (Lemmings, for instance). Is the in-built destruction mechanism of lemmings wasteful? No.

The attention of the public is focused on the seal hunt while Hydro continues with plans to threaten the entire Fraser salmon stocks with its dam on the McGregor.

Saving Salmon

Why not start a save-the-salmon campaign, you guys? The lonely and few dedicated conservationists who are struggling against this diabolical scheme are in desperate straits. Tired, unfunded, unsupported and losing. Greenpeace has focused public attention elsewhere.

So what about the seals? If the stocks are managed properly they will not be hunted to extinction. I suspect Greenpeace knows this very well.

So we're back to the original question: is it the method of killing or the killing itself? Is it who is doing the killing or the fact that killing is being done? Is it how many are killed or that none should be killed? Is the issue cruelty or conservation?

The setting up of one species as a favorite animal is an act of uninformed and unacceptable urban arrogance. It champions the most blatant form of ecological value judgment. Mother nature has no favorite animals and neither should we.

Civil Liberties Crumbling

By R. V. DENENBERG

For centuries an exporter of constitutional principles, Britain has remained, idiosyncratically, without a written constitution of its own. Recently, the British have begun to wonder whether the traditional advantages of living without such a document have begun to be outweighed by the modern disadvantages.

Their reconsideration has been reluctant, to be sure. Even now the British are not considering writing down an entire constitution, merely the part that deals with the rights of individuals. They have been moved to do so by a concern that the ancient liberties of Englishmen may not be as firmly rooted as they were once thought to be.

That possibility was demonstrated to many Britons in January when it required an extraordinary judicial decision to defend an individual's right of access to the courts without the permission of the attorney general. The difference between British and United States notions of constitutional standards was also highlighted recently by the Home Secretary's order to deport two American writers, Philip Agee and Mark Hosenball, on vague national security grounds without even disclosing the nature of the accusations or the evidence against them. Last week the High Court ruled that it lacked the power to overturn the order against Hosenball.

The British reluctance to adopt a written Bill of Rights is paradoxical because the ideas and even the wording of the constitutional guarantees of many other countries, most notably the United States, have been drawn from British statements of individual rights.

But the statements and other definitions of rights were never elevated to constitutional status. Largely because the British have always suspected that constitutional declarations of rights are easily promulgated and can be just as easily suspended when a government decrees an "emergency." The suspension of the elaborate protections for the individual in the Indian Constitution, a lineal descendant of British principles by way of the United States Constitution, is the most notable recent evidence in support of that suspicion.

Albeit less grandiloquent and less understandable to the average person, the British have considered their method of protecting civil liberties superior to that of other countries. Rather than being neatly compiled in a written constitution, their rights were dispersed and embedded in the conventions of the common law, built up over centuries through court precedent, and supplemented by statutes. According to the classic exposition of A. V. Dicey, a 19-century constitutional authority, the British citizen was safe from arbitrary official acts because the government, bound by the "rule of law," could not go beyond these conventions. "Englishmen," Dicey argued in 1885, "are ruled by the law, and by the law alone; a man may with us be punished for a breach of the law, but he can be punished for nothing else."

What happened to shake the faith of so many influential minds in the efficacy of the traditional system for protecting individual rights? In large part, it was the growth in the size and complexity of the government after the Second World War. With the development of a large bureaucratic apparatus to administer the health and welfare system, an extensive system of economic regulation and nationalized industries, many aspects of a Briton's life came to be governed by administrative regulations and discretionary decisions rather than by legal precedents. R. M. Jackson, a Cambridge legal scholar, observed in 1967 that it had become "impossible to maintain that Dicey's rule of law was still a valid deduction from legal facts." The sovereignty of Parliament offered no solace, since Parliament enacted the legislation conferring such wide discretion on administrators.

The precarious nature of the existing mechanism for enforcing the rights of individuals was brought home forcefully in January when a private citizen asked the Court of Appeal to block a threatened trade union boycott of mail from South Africa. The boycott would have been a clear violation of criminal law, but according to convention, suits affecting the public interest require the consent of the attorney-general, to insure, as Silkin said, that the courts are not "flooded with all kinds of attempts to obtain remedies."

The Court of Appeal, rather daringly, allowed the suit to proceed. The presiding judge alluded to the fact that in the United States individuals who meet the court's own rules for "standing" do not need the permission of a government official to bring similar actions. The decision showed how sharp the differences are between those who believe with Silkin that the accountability of ministers, like the attorney general, to an elected Parliament provides effective protection for civil liberties and the doubters. Expressing the sentiments of the latter, London's Financial Times commented: "There is a widespread fear that Parliament is no longer able or willing to act as an adequate check on the power of government."

For the doubters to have their way and see a formal Bill of Rights adopted, they will have to allay the fears of the believers in Parliamentary sovereignty that an unrepresentative judiciary would then have the power to review and invalidate legislation it deems in conflict with the rights listed. Issues of class and ideology complicate the matter. Judicial review is particularly threatening to the Labor Party's socialist and working-class constituency, which believe that judges drawn from upper strata of society would be unsympathetic to its goals. Conservatives would probably insist that a bill of rights contain protection for private property to try to frustrate the Laborites' "confiscatory" legislation.

Eyeball Frothing Is Out

russell baker

You can tell things are bad. Hardly anybody has time or money to enjoy a good rage anymore.

In the old days, rage ran ankle-deep in the streets and wall-to-wall in the government. There was rage about the war and rage about Watergate, rage about injustice, oppression, brutality, corruption, greed, ignorance and hypocrisy — in short, rage about every possible manifestation of the fact that human beings were still pretty much in charge of the world. Not any more.

Nowadays you can walk for miles without seeing a single soul in even medium dudgeon. This is hard on those newspaper columnists who specialize in rage columns. Three times a week they are expected to flail away at the indecencies of the human condition with sufficient plausibility to ruin their readers' digestion. And now, on every side, they are beset by a population seemingly invulnerable to easily raised blood pressure.

I had been watching their desperate toil with some amusement as, with the public rage index dropping toward zero, they strained to open up new fields of rage. They have tried attacking dogs, the Congress, Amy Carter's dinner reading, the persecutors of smut, the Coast Guard, Liberian tankers and the Sunbelt, with no discernible result.

I am not so amused about it today, for I have it in my mind to spin off an angry little rage column of my own, a little something to keep my hand in at the art of making readers froth at the eyeballs. Yet when I turn to the papers to see what people are in a rage about, what do I find?

Well, American fashion designers are absolutely beside themselves about Margaret Trudeau, wife of the Canadian prime minister, for coming to a formal White House dinner in a knee-length dress instead of the usual ankle-tickler. Some rage. I remember when people who loved humanity would have blown up the physics lab to protest anybody's having the bestiality to go to the White House wearing anything at all.

Then there is Anita Bryant, the personification of orange juice. She is in a perfect fury at "militant" homosexuals, and getting fancy newspaper play, too. She asserts these people are getting her "blacklisted" because she is against laws that would give homosexuals full rights of citizenship.

With a Herculean effort, one could possibly work up a dram or two of rage on one side or the other of this issue, but it would hardly be convincing. Not like the old days when all you had to do was mention "big oil" to set the national pulse pounding.

One more whack, perhaps, at "big oil" to see if there is a little residue of the good old rage left? Not half likely. Ever since Mobil persuaded me that oil is man's best pal, it would seem like kicking a pussy cat.

And, in any case, who would fume along with me?

Is the rage all used up? Is the cupboard bare? It would seem so, but explaining its disappearance is not so easy. Carter zealots will probably say it is because we have stopped presidents and now have a Jimmy in the White House. Physicians might argue that the human carcass's rage is finite, and that Americans used up all theirs in the great orgiastic rages of the 1960s and early 1970s.

My own theory, which I have cribbed from a social philosopher who probably doesn't really believe it, and whose identity I will therefore keep secret, is that public rage is a phenomenom of affluence.

In bad times, most people are too busy working at survival to have much energy left over for emotional excesses. And rage, with its immense demands on the emotional stockpiles, is perhaps the most luxurious of all possible emotions. Indulging it heavily, as we did in the 60s and early 70s, is a form of hedonism possible only in the most overstuffed economies.

In fact, the most intensive and destructive acts of rage were commonly associated during those years with the upper middle class, and particularly with their children, who were enjoying a prosperity without precedent.

Typically, the lowest-income people, whose plight ought logically to provoke the most furious rage, seem instead to suppress it and, indeed, in their political views, to be among the most conservative elements of the population.

If rage is a luxury item, its present disappearance from the American stage is only another economic indicator of bad times all over.

Showdown April 18 On Banking Unions

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Labor Relations Board has set April 18 as the date of a showdown that could change the face of the Canadian banking industry.

The board will sit in Vancouver that day to rule whether or not bank employees may unionize on a branch-by-branch basis or must organize nationally.

"If they rule we have to organize nationally, they're saying bank workers don't have the right to organize," says Jackie Ainsworth, a teller and secretary of Vancouver's fledgling union for bank employees.

The union — Local 2 of the Service, Office, Retail and Office Workers' Union of Canada — argues that bank employees need the right to unionize on a branch-by-branch basis to win improvements in wages and working conditions.

In a brief eight-month drive, the union has filed for certification in 20 Vancouver-area branches and at the Bank of Nova Scotia data centre.

The data centre application was a breakthrough, says Ainsworth, because the centre's 100 employees handle "all the cheques in the province and have the power to shut down the province overnight."

Data centre employees are paid "just above the minimum wage," said Ainsworth and frequently work a seven-to eight-hour day with a single 30-minute break. Since smoking is forbidden in the centre, smokers take two 15-minute breaks instead, she said.

"Data centres almost work on a piece-work basis," she said. "When employees have finished their daily quota, they can go home." Tellers are often denied even this slight benefit, she said, and under-staffing is a major grievance.

"Bank employees should be recognized as skilled employees," said Ainsworth, because they work up to five hours without a break and are expected to balance the books, a day's $20,000-worth of transactions right down to the penny.

BBC Realty Trust

Bank of British Columbia Realty Trust reports that net income for 1976 increased to $3 million, compared with $2.8 million in the previous year. Gross income rose to $10.6 million, compared with $9.1 million in 1975. President Trevor Pilley said that during 1976 the trust continued its investment program in B.C. and increased its investments in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. He said the trust also continued its policy of replacing maturing investments as well as expanding its investments on completed real estate. He said the company has entered 1977 in a mood of cautious optimism. Total assets rose to $96.8 million, compared with $86.6 million in 1975. BBC Realty Trust is sponsored by the Bank of B.C.

Cornat

Cornat Industries Ltd. says in a preliminary report that 1976 net earnings were $5,288,000 or $1.01 a share, down from $6,031,000 or $1.17 a share the year before. The company report says revenues increased by 13.4 per cent to $134 million from $118.2 million in 1975. Results included the earnings of Bralorne Resources Ltd. for the last four months of 1976, following acquisition of control by Cornat. Peter Sounders, company president, said 1976 earnings were adversely affected by high interest costs and the economic climate in Canada under anti-inflation controls. Cornat acquired control of Versatile Manufacturing Ltd. of Winnipeg Jan. 10 this year and Crnat's share of Versatile earnings will be consolidated from the beginning of 1977.

Kelly Douglas

Kelly, Douglas and Co. Ltd. reports an increase in net profit in 1976 to $8.2 million from the 1975 level of $7.5 million. Net earnings, however, dropped to $1.30 a share in 1976 from $1.44 a share in the previous year because of a share isue during the year for the purchase of Westfair Foods Ltd. An extraordinary item of $5.1 million, derived mainly from sale of subsidiary Nabob Foods Ltd., pushed 1976 net profit to $13.4 million or $2.11 a share. Total sales for 1978 amounted to $941 million up from $817.4 million in 1975.

Whonnock

Whonnock Industries Ltd. reports net income in the three months ended Feb. 26 was $1,215,813 or 72 cents a share, compared with income of $488,128 or 29 cents a share for the corresponding period of 1976. Earnings per share fully diluted were 63 cents, up from 26 cents. The company attributed the increases to an aggressive acquisition program and higher prices for its products. Acquisitions included the coastal operations of Triangle Pacific Ltd. for $10 million — a sawmill, planer mill and 45 acres of industrial land in New Westminster, and the assets of Garrett Enumclaw Co. in Washington State.

Torstar

Torstar Corp., parent company of The Toronto Star, is planning a five-year, $100-million expansion program to broaden its share of the communications market, company president William A. Dimma said. Dimma said in an interview that The Star, like most major newspapers in North America, is facing increasing competition from other segmnts of the media such as television and magazines. Torstar is becoming involved in television, radio and magazine and book publishing as means of reducing its dependence on the economic cyclicity of the newspaper business, he said. Newspaper profits have declined this year and The Star has embarked on "an active and aggressive cost-reduction program" to maintain its market strength, Dimma said.

S. Pacific Housing B.C.-Built

VANCOUVER (CP) — A five-company British Columbia housing consortium has completed a "multi-million dollar" deal to sell 342 housing units to a South Pacific copper mining firm.

A. G. Scott, president of Homexpo Canada Ltd., said his consortium beat out competition from companies in Australia and southeast Asia to win the contract to provide housing for Bougainville Copper Corp.'s mine in Papua-New Guinea.

Scott, who refused to disclose the exact value of the shipment, said the consortium will open an office in Kuwait to handle negotiations for contracts in Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

The consortium is made up of Mariner Homes Ltd. of Penticton, Chateau Homes Ltd. of Kelowna, Structural Wood Components Ltd. of Langley, Fraser Pacific Industries Ltd. of Surrey and Fowler and Associates Ltd. of Surrey.

Mauled by Dogs, Girl, 6, Gets $50,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — A six-year-old Fraser Valley girl, left with permanent scars from a 1975 dog mauling, was awarded $50,000 damages Wednesday in B.C. Supreme Court.

The award, by Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz, was the highest ever made in B.C. for this type of injury.

The award went to Crystal Murela Rhoule, who was three years old when she was savagely attacked by two unattended German shepherds near her home in Hatzic. She was found unconscious and required 150 stitches to her legs, arms and body.

Sandy Rhoule, the child's mother, said "our daughter deserves every cent of it (the award)."

Vernon Rhoule, the father, said: "I feel we got what my daughter deserves."

"This child has suffered and will continue to suffer as long as she lives with extensive scarring to her body.

"She is exceptionally pretty. As she grows older she will, in all probability, have to keep her legs and thighs covered by long skirts or slacks."

The judge said medical evidence showed that the dogs, owned by Lloyd and Sherry Walters, "bit and savagely tore" the child's legs as well as lacerating and puncturing the scalp, upper body, arms and abdomen.

In making the award against the Walters, the judge said "the evidence clearly shows that the defendants knew that the dogs were dangerous in that they had a propensity to attack and had, in fact, attacked people prior to this incident."

The dogs have since been killed.

The judge said the owners knew their dogs were dangerous and therefore were under an absolute duty to confine or control them so that they could not cause injury.

Chief Justice Nemetz said the girl was already undergone substantial surgery "and will face future plastic reconstructive surgery with its attendant pain and cost."

Rhoule said of the Jan. 26, 1975, incident: "I'm just lucky that I've got my daugher — she very nearly died. If I hadn't got her to the hospital quickly she could have bled to death—they tore her to bits."

Crystal Rhoule and her father, Vernon

Teachers' President Aims for Closer Ties

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. Teachers Federation must develop a closer working relationship with the provincial education department, school board and the home and school federation, the new president of the teachers group said Wednesday.

Pat Brady, a Prince George elementary school teacher who represents the moderate faction of the federation, beat left-wing opponent Don Walmsley by 74 votes, Brady succeeds Bill Broadley, another moderate.

"There is no way any of these groups can act in isolation," said Brady. "I would approach the position of president as one of co-operation rather than confrontation."

Brady said in an interview later that the federation must get together with the other areas of the education milieu to establish or re-establish lines of communication.

Asked if the realtionship with trustees and the government had not been good, up to now, he replied that "relationships between any organizations, especially when you have a common goal — the education of children — you have tugs and strains and you must strengthen existing lines.

"If there are breaks in communication you must shore them up."

Brady, 40, said the federation's main aim is to be involved in contributing to education policy.

He said that the reaction to social issues by the federation will depend on its budget and the decision of the executive committee.

Brady told federation members that other important challenges facing teachers this year are how better to utilize teachers' talents, especially in school areas with declining enrolment.

Another issue, he said, is school construction in areas where enrolment is increasing.

PROBE BEGINS ON AGE BIAS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. human rights commission board of inquiry began Wednesday to deal with a complaint of discrimination on the basis of age in the case of a 32-year-old man.

Russell Burns of Courtenay told the inquiry he was refused entry into the Plumbing and Pipefitting Union, Local 170, apprenticeship program because he was more than 25 years of age.

Burns claimed discrimination by the union and by the union's apprenticeship board.

The five-member board has to establish the definition of age under the section of the B.C. human rights code that deals with age discrimination.

The code says people cannot discriminate without reasonable cause and that age, among other things, "shall not constitute reasonable cause."

However, the code defines age as meaning "any age of 45 years or more and less than 65 years."

Burns said that after completing a pre-apprenticeship training program at a Victoria college, he worked for a unionized plumbing and pipefitting company in the Comox area for the required 90 days and then applied for the apprenticeship program.

He testified that Don Currie, director of training for the plumbers' union, said he was too old and referred to union regulations which state that "applications for apprenticeship not previously connected with the trade must be between the ages of 18 and 25 years."

Morley Shortt, counsel for the plumbers' union and the apprenticeship board, said the evidence did not prove that Burns was refused admittance solely on the basis of his age.

Hanne Jensen, human rights investigating officer, said Currie told her that Burns was refused admittance "because of his age and because there were 100 applications ahead of him."

Jensen said none of the other applicants had completed the six-month training program.

The board reserved decision.

Raise in Pay Blocked

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Inability to create an agreeable job classification has blocked a pay raise from 15 employees of a detoxification unit for almost a year.

The unit, a pilot project in British Columbia financed by the alcohol and drug commission, opened at Prince George Regional Hospital in April, 1976.

Starting salary was $905 a month, the same as an orderly in a hospital, and employees were told they had to join a union.

The Health Sciences Association and the Hospital Employees Union both applied to represent the 15 workers. The union was certified after the association withdrew its application.

While certification was under way, no pay increases could be granted, according to the provincial Labor Relations Act.

Now, the workers, the union and the hospital labor relations association cannot agree on a job classification.

Olympic Grant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States commerce department has formally approved a $30.2 million grant to help Lake Placid construct or renovate five facilities for the 1980 Winter Olympics. The Lake Placid Olympic organizing committee said it plans to break ground for the facilities April 21.

Newsroom Search Illegal–Attorney

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Jan. 11 search by federal investigators of Province and Sun newsrooms was illegal and a breach of freedom of the press, the British Columbia Supreme Court was told Wednesday.

Lawyer Jack Giles, representing Pacific Press which prints the two newspapers, also told Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz there was carelessness by investigators Simon Wapniarski and Clare Savage in their applications for warrants authorizing the search.

Pacific Press is seeking an order quashing the warrants and a court declaration that the investigators acted "without lawful justification or authority" in the search.

The court action followed a two-hour search of several Sun and Province reporters' desks and the seizure of their notes and other information. About 75 photo negatives were also seized.

MYSTERY POWDER RETURNED

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — An unidentified 49-year-old powder and a collection of 63 outdated prescription bottles were the winners in the Lions Gate hospital old pill contest.

Sonja Sanquinetti of Vancouver, who turned in an unidentified powder in a medicine box, prescribed in 1928, and Maureen Reid of North Vancouver, who turned in 63 pill bottles, each have been awarded a dinner for two for their contributions.

Shirley Pruden of the hospital's pharmaceutical department said the campaign against hoarding old medicines was aimed to protect children from accidental poisoning.

Pruden said the 1928 powder will remain a mystery because it's not worth the time and expense to have it analyzed, and Sanguinetti doesn't know what it is because the box and powder came among other items from an estate.

Stabbing Victim's Husband Raps Mexican Police Work

VANCOUVER (CP) — The husband of a Vancouver-area woman stabbed while visiting Tijuana says he was disgusted with the way Mexican police handled the case.

Norma Mason, 37, of Surrey, was reported in fairly good condition in hospital in nearby New Westminster Wednesday.

She was stabbed in the back while on a day tour of Tijuana with her husband, Gordon, her mother and her three children. Mason said Wednesday that his wife still had some paralysis in her right side.

He said they were about to return to the United States on Tuesday when the attack occurred in "broad daylight." A man walked up to Mrs. Mason and with a pushing, underhand motion shoved a knife in her back. The assailant then fled.

"I couldn't believe what had happened for a moment," Mason said. "It happened so quickly." Mason said the attacker made no attempt to take his wife's purse and there appeared to be no motive.

He also said he was shocked and disgusted at the inept way the Tijuana police investigated the incident, saying that in fact there appeared to be no effort made to investigate.

Police apparently didn't want the family to leave Mexico.

Mason said that while they were crossing the border into the U.S. shortly after the attack on Tuesday, Mexican police attempted to persuade their son to return to "help in the investigation."

Mason said he believed it was an attempt to get him back into Mexico and he told his son to get on the tour bus and not get out for any reason until it reached San Diego.

Mrs. Mason was placed on a stretcher and flown to Vancouver where an ambulance was waiting at the airport to take her to hospital.

Mason praised the San Diego authorities, saying "everyone bent over backwards to help and give emergency aid."

Mrs. Mason's mother and children were in Los Angeles Wednesday and were expected to return in a few days.

FERRY INJURIES

NANAIMO (CP) — Escalator systems on the new double-deck ferries of the B.C. Ferries Corporation were shut off Wednesday after injuries were reported on the Queen of Coquitlam Monday.

Graeme Roberts, a ferries corporation director, said he has received confirmation from Victoria that, following his recommendation, the escalators will be shut down until a full investigation is done of the system and until a safety mechanism can be devised.

"The escalators will not be started up again until all the problems are rectified," he said.

Kuwait, Soviets Sign First Arms Agreement

KUWAIT (UPI) — Kuwait has agreed to make large-scale arms purchases from the Soviet Union, including SAM-7 ground-to-air missiles, the newspaper Al Hadaf said today.

It was the first known arms deal between the Russians and Kuwait. The tiny, oil-rich sheikhdom on the Persian Gulf previously bought its weapons from the United States, Britain and France.

"But the two countries have postponed discussion of an agreement to buy other Soviet arms, including artillery and tanks," Al Hadaf said.

"The agreement will be signed in the near future."

Kuwait-Soviet arms talks started more than two years ago, when the sheikhdom decided to reduce its dependence on the United States and Britain for arms.

"But," Al Hadaf said, "the negotiations ran into several problems, including Kuwait's reluctance to allow Russian military advisers into the country or to send Kuwaitis to the Soviet Union for training."

Instead, Egyptian and Syrian officers familiar with the Soviet equipment will train the Kuwaiti army, it said.

The newspaper said a Kuwaiti military delegation will leave for Moscow soon to sign the agreement and discuss future arms deals.

Kuwait has also turned to Yugoslavia for weaponry, and the Yugoslavs are building air and naval facilities in the emirate, according to eastern European diplomatic sources.

SADAT STARTS PEACE TOUR

CAIRO (Reuter) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat left today for West Germany at the start of a European and North American tour.

He will be canvassing support from leaders of West Germany, France and the United States for Egypt's efforts to resolve the Middle East conflict.

Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi, scheduled to travel with Sadat, remained behind in Cairo because of the death of his mother.

He will join the president later, the Egyptian news agency, MENA, said.

Sadat's three-country trip follows intensive consultations between Cairo and other Arab capitals to estabalish a concerted stand toward Middle East peace-seeking efforts, including a resumption of the Geneva conference.

Sadat's talks in Bonn, Paris and Washington will be a follow-up of his recent discussions in Cairo with West Germany Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, French Foreign Minister Louis de Guiringaud and U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance.

The three had visited Egypt for separate talks on the Middle East crisis and boosting bilateral relations.

Truce Ends In Lebanon

BEIRUT (UPI) — Israeli-backed rightist militiamen broke a week-long informal truce and seized a leftist-held border village, rightist sources said today.

They said the Christian rightists exchanged heavy artillery fire with leftists and Palestinians and took the village of Taybe, two miles from the Israeli border, Wednesday evening after a day-long battle that killed 22 persons.

The rightist Christian offensive, which both rightists and leftists described as a major push, broke a week-long informal truce in the south.

Rightists officials said the fighting died down today but rightist militiamen in Taybe were shelling the nearby leftist villages of Arnoun, Deir Sirian and Ghandouriyeh.

PEARSON PRESENTS . . .

An opening number that will include all participants, followed by an international potpourri of music and dance, will be among the features of Meet Pearson College at McPherson Playhouse at 8:30 p.m. Sunday.

Music and dance from Scotland and Austria will be followed by action and music from Japan. A short play in Spanish precedes love songs from Italy and Mexico, and a folksong from Japan is contrasted with a brief jazz-ballet number. The first half ends with songs and dances from Africa.

Two excerpts from the recent production of Shakespeare's The Tempest, a dance from Bali; poetry and prose from around the world proclaiming the brotherhood of man and condemning war will be interspersed with songs by the Pearson College Choir.

A Chinese choir will perform a dance of China and the program concludes with folk songs.

Gasoline is too expensive to waste. Before you buy any new car, take a hard look at its fuel efficiency.

The Government of Canada has now ranked more than 250 1977 model cars for their miles-per-gallon performance. Most new cars are labelled with their mileage rating at the factory. Look for these labels at the dealership. If you don't see them, ask for them.

U.S. Economic Trends Rebounding from Hard Winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government reported Wednesday that its index designed to anticipate trends in the economy rebounded in February from the harsh effects of the severe winter.

The commerce department said its composite index of leading indicators turned up by four-tenths of a per cent in February after plunging 1.2 per cent in January, the biggest drop since the 1974-1975 recession.

The department said that of 10 individual statistics in the leading indicators index, four showed increases. The increase in the work week for manufacturing workers to 40.4 hours from 39.6 hours the month before was the biggest upward influence on the total index.

Also moving upward were the number of new orders received by manufacturers of consumer products and their suppliers, the number of new building permits issued and slower deliveries in supplies.

The slower deliveries are taken as a signal of increased demand and thus quickened economic activity.

Of the five individual components pointing downward, a nine-tenths of a per cent drop in the size of the money supply after adjustment for inflation was the biggest downard influence. Other individual components moving downward were lower wholesale prices for key commodities, a smaller volume of order for new factories and facilities, lower stock prices and a slower growth in assets held by consumers and business.

The layoff rate in manufacturing was unchanged at 1.3 per cent. Two other components of the index were not available in time for computation.

The over-all increase in the index was a relatively modest one, but the upturn was reinforced by rises in two companion indicators.

His Job Is Saving Snakes

By JEREMY HUNTER
Manchester Guardian

PANAMA — John Walsh makes no attempt to apologize for his role as defender of the lives of deadly poisonous snakes. His business is saving animals and snakes — deadly or otherwise.

Walsh, 35, is field project director for Operation Noah II, an ambitious program of the Panamanian government in conjunction with ISPA, the London-based International Society for the Protection of Animals.

The aim is to save thousands of animals, birds and reptiles that would otherwise die from starvation or drowning because of a huge hydro-electric dam recently constructed across the Bayano River.

It will supply electrical power to the eastern part of Panama. It will also create a 300-square mile lake 190 feet deep.

"The Panamanians did not have the money to carry through the whole operation, though they offered to supply us with gasoline," said Walsh. 'But at least the government gives a high priority to the protection of wildlife unlike many of the more developed countries."

Walsh began trying to raise the necessary $80,000. He presented an American television program called Walsh's Animals and raised $60,000 dollars, a lot of it from school children. It's the $1 and $3 contributions that are saving these Bayano animals," he said.

He also wrote to 980 leading U.S. corporations asking for help. All but a handful failed to reply and only one provided any real help, 240 cans of powdered milk.

Walsh began work before the dam gates were closed eight months ago. He surveyed the area to be flooded and produced the first topographical map of the region. He recruited Indians from the Kuna, a tribe that exists solely by hunting.

They formed the nucleus of his rescue team.

He contacted another tribe, the Chocoe whose home for centuries has been the swamps of the Darien Gap. Their knowledge of dug-out canoes, or piraguas, provided Walsh with his boatmen.

He negotiated with the Chocoe for the construction, at $200 each, of 12 large piraguas, the only boats strong enough for his purpose. They were all painted shocking pink. That way, it gave the guys status and it will also prevent the boats from being stolen."

When the dam was closed, the water began to rise very rapidly and forced the animals, both land and tree-dwelling, onto the higher ground.

Onetime hills became islands, and trees began to die as their roots were starved of oxygen. As the tree died, so did the animal's sustenance.

Work for Walsh and his crew begins before dawn. The Indians load the piraguas with nets, cages, sacks, machetes, axes, spare gasoline, tools and medical supplies and outboard motors are clamped to the sterns.

Three Indians climb into each piragua, one in the bow to keep watch for submerged logs, another on the lookout for animals. At over 20 knots they converge on an island. Walsh joins the Indians as they jump ashore, the majority in bare feet despite the highly venomous Fer-de-Lance and Bushmaster snakes.

With uncanny intuition, the Indians check for the tracks of animal life, be it ant-eater, sloth, armadillo, porcupine, red-brocket deer, peccary or occasionally one of the big cats, puma or jaguar.

As soon as an animal is sighted, the shouting doubles in intensity and the group surrounds the frightened animal. Sometimes they are able to get close enough to slip a noose around the animal's neck, or to throw a net over it.

If it escapes, they chase it until it is either too exhausted to move further, or takes to the water. Several Indians swim after it, and the others give chase in the piraguas.

On returning to camp, the rescued animals are catalogued and caged for the night. The weaker ones are retained for a few days so that they can build up strength to survive in an area of the lake designated by the government as a 'safe" release site.

Gardening Program Turns On William Head Inmates

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

He's built like a wrestler. Etched on his left biceps is a large purple tattoo with the words "Born to Raise Hell."

What's he doing these days?

He's one of a group of 14 inmates enrolled in a practical horticulture course, believed the first offered in a medium or maximum security federal institution.

Peter Murphy, assistant director of occupational development at William Head, says the five-month course, started in January, is attracting considerable interest across the country and could serve as a model for programs in other penitentiaries.

(Imagine a greenhouse in the middle of B.C. Pen. As one inmate exclaimed: "That's far out!")

William Head is considered a logical centre to test the idea, being only 20 miles from what Victorians at least like to consider the best bloomin' city in the land.

But there are other reasons. The prison is one of Canada's largest with 85 acres of prime waterfront property. There is a huge hot-water heated greenhouse on the site — more than 1,000 square feet of glass-covered space. It's close to a ready supply of fertilizer — seawood washed up on the rocky indented shoreline.

Schuiterma, well-known to Victorians for his radio and television gardening shows, says he was apprehensive at first about the assignment.

But not any more.

"It's a challenge, but the guys in the course are really keen. They want to learn," he says. "They know they have to care for the plants or the plants don't survive."

That lesson alone, says Ron Allan, head of the vocational program, has broad implications.

Classes are held four mornings a week in a cluttered cramped machine shop next to the greenhouse. About half the time is devoted to theory; the rest to practical work. The course ends in May.

Before the course started the greenhouse was seldom used to capacity. Twelve coldframes beside the building were falling into disrepair. And a 50-foot by 30-foot garden plot on the other side othe building had for years only had one crop—strawberries.

Since the course began, the greenhouse has become filled with a proliferation of plants, the coldframes are being readied for transplants, and the garden plot cultivated with a variety of vegetables.

More than 300 flats of plant seedlings have been prepared — zinnias, salvia, lobelia, pansies, geraniums by the score, lettuce, radishes, tomato and the piece de resistance, a half dozen pomtoms (tomato-potato grafts).

The flowers will decorate the prison grounds, and the vegetables are destined for the prison kitchen.

Schuiterma is also instructing the inmates in hydrophonic gardening — growing plants in a water-saturated, low polysalt, stone aggregate medium — the hallmark of intensive farming.

Murphy said there have already been a number of spin-off benefits from the course. There are negotiations under way with the provincial department of agriculture to establish a mini-experimental station at the prison. There is also talk of setting up a marine centre to study the use of seaweed as a fertilizer. And there are preliminary discussions to have inmates released on day passes to tend the gardens at Royal Roads College. Murphy says the skills the inmates learn should make it easier for them to find jobs when they get out.

But that's not the reason for the course's popularity, he suggests. Rather it's the "instant rewards" the inmates get in watching their seeds sprout.

In prison, he says, there aren't many rewards.

UVic, Camosun Join In Hunt for Housing

Camosun College and the University of Victoria have joined forces to fight the problem of finding off-campus housing for out-of-town students.

A central registry to serve students from both institutions is in operation at UVic, housing services manager Shirley Baker has announced.

Camosun, which opened in 1971, has never had a housing service, and is experiencing increasing numbers of students coming from out of town.

The central registry will be mutually beneficial to both institutions, Mrs. Baker said. About the same time UVic students leave their winter studies, Camosun begins a spring semester.

The central registry will be immediately aware of space that can be turned over to Camosun students.

Camosun students have always gone out to UVic to check out the housing lists, and the joint service will "regularize this informal relationship," she said.

About 60 per cent of UVic's 5,300 students and about 10 per cent of Camosun's 3,200 students are from out of town.

Camosun will contribute funds and staff time on a prorated basis.

Ed Fougner, Camosun's chairman of student services, said the agreement is an example of the way the two institutions should co-operate.

Ask the Times

Q. During the last two years I have noticed a bird and would like to know its name. Its wingspan is greater than a seagull but otherwise the body is about the same. The color is either dark grey or black. The bird will rest on tree tops and is attacked by crows, of course. Its cry is a definite "culoke." The bird is usually alone or with one other, not in a group. — F.O.H.

A. According to the birds and mammals department of the Provincial Museum, this would be a raven.

Q. Could I please have the address of Carol Burnett of the television Carol Burnett Show? M.H.

A. You can write her c/o Tom Corcoran, Carol Burnett Show, 7800 Beverly, Los Angeles, California, 90036, U.S.A.

Q. Could you please tell me what happened to Karen Ann Quinlan? H.S.

A. On March 29, Karen passed her 23rd birthday, almost a year after the New Jersey Supreme Court gave her parents the right to allow her to die. She is unconscious in a nursing home in New York, breathing without the respirator that had sustained her life for more than a year. Miss Quinlan fell into a coma after taking a mixture of alcohol and tranquilizers at a party on April 14, 1975.

Another Power Play Faces Hospital Board

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Once again a power play of some sort is shaping up for the annual meeting of Victoria General Hospital on April 28.

What isn't so clear is what special interest group is involved although there is speculation it may be pro or anti-abortionists.

Last year it was a struggle for board seats between the NDP and the rest and it resulted in a sort of standoff.

The signs this year that some group has a packed meeting in mind are the same as last year, a last-minute flurry of membership applications in the public society which runs the hospital. Membership carries with it a vote for who will fill the four board seats where terms expire this year.

Deadline for new members joining in time to vote at the annual meeting was Monday and there were 31 applications on that day alone. All told there are 141 new member applications.

At the time of last year's annual meeting there were 267 paid-up members and these people can renew membership at the door of this year's annual meeting by paying the $2 annual membership fee. For this reason it's impossible to say how many voting members there are for the annual meeting but it could run more than 400.

There are 13 members on the Victoria General board of directors, four appointed and nine elected on a staggered basis. This year there are three seats to be filled for three-year terms as well as one for a one-year term. The latter seat represents the balance of Larry Ryan's term. He resigned from the hospital board earlier this year after being elected to Victoria city council.

Board members whose terms are up this year are chairman Doug Watts, Charles Goodman and former chairman Art Saunders.

Last year's annual meeting battle, which took place without any debate, began with the earlier resignation from the board of Carol Pickup and Jewel Rodstrum, both appointed by the former NDP government.

Among seven candidates for three seats a year ago were three with clear NDP affiliation. Pickup was elected but the other two, including Rodstrum, were not.

Victoria General is more vulnerable to special interest groups invading its board than is Royal Jubilee Hospital. At Jubilee, nine of the 13 members are appointed, six by area municipalities, two by the provincial government and one by the medical staff. The other four are elected every other year.

FRESH DIVERS

Civilian divers will be brought in to help in the search for Richard Michael Laik, 20, of 394 Walter, missing and presumed drowned in Kemp Lake.

RCMP divers have spent five days searching the lake.

Laik disappeared when a small boat carrying him and two friends filled with water and overturned in the middle of the lake.

The other two — Randy Robertson and Brian McClymont, both 20, and of Victoria — were picked up by a boater who heard their cries for help.

CUPE Talks Rolling

A union spokesman said today the pace of talks has picked up considerably between six locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association.

"The progress was astounding," the union's joint negotiating council representative Bob Cunningham said in describing a Wednesday session.

Earlier in the week Cunningham had termed the continuing talks as "practically a waste of time," but he said the latest meeting, between the GVLRA and locals 382 and 947, representing inside and outside school board employees, was extremely fruitful.

Cunningham said management rejected only two points put forward by the union, accepting eight items and referring the remaining 20 to a second meeting next Wednesday.

"The atmosphere was far better than it had been previously," said Cunningham.

The six CUPE locals are meeting independently with the GVLRA to clear up all no-cost items before beginning joint negotiation on the issue of wages.

The GVLRA will meet next Tuesday morning with locals representing Oak Bay and Esquimalt municipal workers, to be followed by an afternoon session with the local for Saanich employees.

Representatives for City Hall outside workers will meet the GVLRA next Wednesday.

Bike Route Open in a Month

Construction of the model bikeway route between the University of Victoria and Beacon Hill Park is well advanced, and the route should be open to cyclists by the end of April, city traffic engineer Derek Wild said Wednesday.

The four-mile route links several parks, schools and the two major hospitals.

In several places, special paths have had to be built in the boulevards.

For the Victoria portion of the route, most of the work of laying gravel beds and building ramps has been completed, and Wild said with the opening of the asphalt plants the paving can now be completed.

In Saanich, he said, work is proceeding on the Dean Avenue section of the route.

No official opening has yet been arranged, but Wild said this may take the form of municipal politicians riding bikes on their respective portions of the bikeway route, and "shaking hands at the border."

Three More for Hydro

B.C. Hydro will soon get an extra three directors as part of an attempt to make the giant corporation more accountable, Premier Bill Bennett said today.

Bennett, speaking to the B.C. Association of Broadcasters convention in the Empress Hotel, said he will make an announcement shortly on "innovative new ways" to make Hydro more representative of the people of B.C.

He said that while he has the greatest of respect for current Hydro directors, there is a need for more "depth of viewpoint" on the board of directors.

"Hydro has been administered and directed very professionally but the directorship . . . should also involve other abilities besides technical and business decisions," the premier said.

The corporation also needs greater regional representation, he said.

Hydro has come in for heavy criticism from all parties in the legislature this session and Bennett hinted earlier he is planning to place greater controls on the corporation.

He said today Hydro has a "major communications problem" but added that government has the same problem.

Branch Still Trying For Detention Home

The provincial corrections branch still wants to establish a female detention home in Victoria, despite neighborhood opposition, says project co-ordinator John Stewart.

Asked if the original plan to use the house at 2804 Graham Street is still being considered, Stewart said that "the situation is being assessed at this time."

The home is needed and Victoria is the logical place, he added.

At a neighborhood meeting earlier this month, most residents who live near the Graham Street house opposed the idea because they feared such a home would attract undesirables.

But others discount those fears. Offenders sent to a detention home would not be hardened criminals. Most would be first offenders sentenced for minor crimes such as shoplifting or impaired driving.

Stewart said a judge doesn't have the option of sentencing a working woman to 14 days to be served on weekends, as some men are sentenced. Women have to be sent to the mainland for 14 days because there is nowhere for female offenders on the Island.

Betty Tarrant, regional justice co-ordinator in Vancouver, said a similar home is about to open there, except the occupants will have been convicted of more serious crimes, including drug offences.

There were similar fears expressed by neighbors during planning stages, but after details were explained, the majority accepted the idea, she said.

Fears of disrupted neighborhood are unfounded, she says, because such a home is self-policing — the offenders know the option is to be sent back to Oakalla so they make sure they and their visitors behave.

Tarrant, a strong advocate of such homes says there are numerous advantages to the offender and the community. Residents of the homes are encouraged to find jobs, and when they do, they pay room and board, and their own medical and dental costs.

Those who can't find employment have to do volunteer work in the community. They are also encouraged to upgrade their education.

Out Twice For Stealing

Canadian Rink Upset Again

KARLSTAD, Sweden — Scandanavian rinks have turned on Canada and Jimmy Ursel's rink from Montreal, after winning its first four games, has suddenly become a chaser in the world curling championships.

A young Swedish rink skipped by Ragnar Kamp started Canada's slide from the lead by posting a 7-4, extra-end victory over Ursel on Wednesday.

Norway came along today to score a more resounding upset, 6-5, and the Canadians fell into a three-way tie for second place.

Sweden and Switzerland moved into the lead with 5-1, won-lost records. Canada, the United States and Scotland followed with 4-2 marks.

Sweden defeated Denmark 7-2 and Switzerland slipped past West Germany, 9-8. The Scots moved up with the leaders by upsetting the U.S. 7-2 while in the other sixth-round game today Italy defeated France 8-4.

In other fifth-round games, Switzerland dumped Denmark 7-4, the U.S. beat West Germany 6-3, Norway edged Italy 6-5 and Scotland slipped past France 5-4.

In fourth-round play earlier Wednesday, Canada downed Denmark's Tommy Stjerne 7-3, Switzerland's Jon Carl Rizzi whipped Pierre Boan of France 12-3, American Bruce Roberts of Hibbing, Minn., beat Italy's Giuseppe Dal Molin 7-3 and Norway's Kristian Sorum tripped West Germany 6-5.

The Swedes average 8½ years of curling experience against 20½ for Canadians Ursel—third Art Lobel, second Don Aitken and lead Brian Ross.

It was Canada who had to scramble for a point in the 10th to force the extra end, with Ursel throwing up plenty of garbage but failing to find two points anywhere in or behind it.

He finally settled for a single with last rock, sneaking it through to rest against a Canadian stone in the four-foot.

"With a hit, spin and roll I might have got two," he said. "But it just sat there—it didn't roll at all."

Ursel said the competition appeared to be heating up, with the rinks shooting better than they had.

Boan just missed a draw to the four-foot in the 10th end against Scotland, leaving the Scots lying one and not needing their last rock for victory.

Lowly West Germany gave the U.S., three-quarters complete from the rink that won the world title last year at Duluth, Minn., a stiff run until giving up two in the eighth and one in the ninth to suffer a fifth consecutive loss.

Milbury Scoring 'Only Big Ones'

By The Canadian Press

Boston Bruins defenceman Mike Milbury has scored two game-winning goals this National Hockey League season. One beat Montreal Canadiens and the other beat Buffalo Sabres.

"I only win the big ones," he said Wednesday night after his 40-foot screened shot at 9:40 of the third period lifted the Bruins to a 4-3 triumph over the Sabres. The win gave Boston a one-point lead over second-place Buffalo in the Adams Division.

"We just grind it out and don't panic," said Bruins coach Don Cherry, who watched Boston take a 2-0 lead only to fall behind 3-2.

Buffalo's Don Luce and Gil Perreault had scored in a 1:33 span early in the third period, but defenceman Brad Park scored on a power play at 5:40 of the period and Milbury connected four minutes later.

In other NHL games Wednesday night, Philadelphia Flyers clinched first place in the Patrick Division by tying Cleveland Barons 3-3, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal tied 3-3, New York Rangers trimmed Atlanta Flames 4-3, Washington Capitals beat Pittsburgh Penguins 4-3 and St. Louis Blues downed Chicago Black Hawks 4-1.

Al MacAdam's third-period goal gave Cleveland its tie with Philadelphia, but the point gave the Flyers the championship of the Patrick Division and a bye into the quarter-finals of the playoffs.

Darryl Sittler's 36th goal of the season, mid-way through the final period, brought Toronto from behind for the second time and gave the Maple Leafs their tie with Montreal.

Steve Shutt scored a club record 57th goal for the Canadiens, breaking the mark set last season by Guy Lafleur. Lafleur picked up an assist on Shutt's goal, increasing his league-leading point total to 121 and extending his NHL record consecutive-game point-scoring streak to 25.

The deadlock gave the Canadiens 128 points for the season, a league record, and extended their record home ice unbeaten streak to 33 games—27 victories and six ties.

Bill Riley's goal late in the second period capped a three-goal rally and carried Washington past Pittsburgh for the Capitals' fourth consecutive victory.

Second-period goals by Rick Bourbonnais and Larry Patey plus Floyd Thomson's first goal since Jan. 12, carried St. Louis past Chicago, giving the Blues only their second triumph in 10 games.

Despite the loss, Chicago is in second place in the Smythe Division with 63 points; Minnesota North Stars have 62 points and Vancouver Canucks have 61.

Clippers Hold Lead Over Vees

PENTICTON (CP) — Bob Jansch scored on a breakaway with 10 seconds remaining in overtime Wednesday night to lead Nanaimo Clippers to a 3-1 victory over Penticton Vees in their British Columbia Junior Hockey League playoff series.

The victory before 1,600 fans gave the Clippers a 3-3 edge in the best-of-seven final which they could end with a victory in the next game Friday night at Nanaimo.

Jansch's goal came after Nanaimo netminder Andy Gourlay made a sprawling save on Carey Eades of the Vees. Jansch got the puck on a break and Vees netminder Jim Scammell made the initial save but Jansch jammed home his own rebound.

Roy Stone Tops Seniors

VANCOUVER (CP) — Roy Stone of Trail won the B.C. over-60 curling title Wednesday, finishing round-robin play with a 6-1 record. Stone and Ross Craig of Langley entered the final two rounds of the eight-rink tournament at 4-1. Stone beat Fred Harris of Kelowna 9-2 and Ed McDormand of Victoria 7-6 while Craig lost 8-7 to McDormand and 6-5 to Harris. McDormand finished second at 5-2 while Craig and Harold Keyes of Burnaby were tied for third at 4-3.

LAFLEUR SELECTED

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens has been named National Hockey League player-of-the-year by the Hockey News.

WORST JOKES — The Dobber.

BEST EXCUSE — Edd Moyes. When trailing 8-0, refused to stop peeling off opposition rocks and duck behind, explaining: "What, and have him score more on me!"

Oilers Tramp Aeros

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oilers beat Houston Aeros for the first time in two World Hockey Association seasons Wednesday night, and there's no denying they did it in style.

Linemates Wayne Connelly and Claude St. Sauveur scored two goals each and Rusty Patenaude added a pair to lead the Oilers to an 8-0 win over the Oilers before a near-sellout crowd of 14,247, largest of the season for a league game at Edmonton.

St. Sauveur and Connelly both were released on waivers by Calgary Cowboys early this season. Their brilliant display helped Edmonton move two points ahead of Calgary in the race for the last playoff berth in the western division. Calgary has a game in hand.

In the only other league game Wednesday night, Indianapolis Racers and Cincinnati Stingers played to a 5-5 tie.

Al Hamilton and Brett Callighen added single goals against the short-handed Aeros, who clinched the western division title Tuesday in Winnipeg. The Aeros played without Gordie Howe and his son Mark and had only 16 players dressed.

Cincinnati's Blaine Stoughton and Gene Peacosh of Indianapolis scored three goals each as the Stingers and the Racers battled to their tie.

Have Goalie, Need Effort

New Westminster Bruins have won nine, tied one and lost only two games to Victoria in 12 regular-season meetings with Victoria but Cougar coach Pat Ginnell believes his players "stand a chance" of surviving the first playoff round.

The Cougars and Bruins start a best-of-seven Western Division semi-final tonight in New Westminster. Second game will be played in Memorial Arena on Saturday and the third goes back to New Westminster on Sunday.

In Murray Bannerman, Ginell feels Cougars "have the best goaltender in the league."

"If he's hot and the rest of the players make up their mind to play, I see no reason why we can't win this series," he added.

Cougars also are in good health.

The Bruins aren't. Ace defenceman Barry Beck, recovering from pneumonia, is not expected to be back in the lineup until Saturday. In addition, winger Don Hobbins suffered a rib injury in the Bruins' 5-3 victory over Victoria here Tuesday and was a questionable starter.

The Victoria-Westminster series is one of three starting tonight. Medicine Hat Tigers host Calgary Centennials while Lethbridge Broncos visit the Blades in Saskatoon.

Kamloops Chiefs and Portland Winter Hawks start Friday in Portland while Winnipeg Monarchs and Brandon Wheat Kings start Monday in Winnipeg.

The Brandon-Winnipeg series is a best-of-nine affair. In effect, a Prairie semi-final. Brandon, by finishing first in the overall standings, earned the right to select its opponent.

Lethbridge defeated Winnipeg 8-5 Wednesday in a game that wrapped up the 1976-77 season but had no bearing on the final standing.

In other news Wednesday, Jack Shupe has returned as coach of Medicine Hat. He also will be general manager following the resignation of club president Rod Carey.

Jim McCrimmon, who coached Tigers in recent weeks, will stay on as Shupe's assistant.

NEW BOMBER AIDE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jim Erkenbeck has been hired as an assistant coach by Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Canadian Football League.

Brazeau Tops Firefighters

OTTAWA (CP) — Howard Brazeau is clearly the man to beat as he attempts to win two national firefighters' curling championships in a row.

After the second day of action Wednesday, Brazeau's Fort Smith, N.W.T. rink has five wins against no defeats with Doug Riley of Edmonton his closest rival with a 4-1 won-lost record.

Three rinks tied with 3-2 records are John Campbell of Vancouver, Elward Crouse of Lunenberg, N.S., and Fred Brown of Charlottetown with Gordon Cole of Winnipeg 2-3 and Eric Mitzler of Regina 2-2.

Saanich Gets Split

VERNON — Saanich split two games in the B.C. peewee hockey championship tournament here Wednesday.

They downed Terrace 9-7 but lost 10-5 to Burnaby.

Sonics Trim Rockets To Retain Slim Hope

By The Associated Press

Coach Jack Motta of Washington Bullets has just one rule — and 400 National Basketball Association victories to go along with it.

"My only rule is don't try to figure anything out," Motta said after the Bullets' 110-103 triumph over Atlanta Hawks on Wednesday night, "I mean the travel, the schedule, the officials, the players."

Motta's rule came true again. It was a game the Bullets did not figure to win.

"We lost Phil Chenier early, Elvin Hayes goes scoreless in the first half and we still won," Motta said.

The Bullets won because Tom Henderson scored 22 points, dealt out six assists and took up the slack after Chenier was ejected early in the second period. Leonard Robinson had a game-high 31 points and 12 rebounds for Atlanta.

Washington pulled within 1½ games of first-place Houston in the Central Division when the Rockets lost to Seattle SuperSonics 111-105. Elsewhere, Philadelphia '76ers shaded Detroit Pistons 115-112, Boston Celtics beat Chicago 90-88 and New Orleans Jazz defeated Phoenix Suns 112-100.

Bruce Seals and Nick Weatherspoon scored 25 points apiece as Seattle broke a three-game losing streak and kept alive its slim hopes of making the playoffs.

NO DIVORCE POSSIBLE

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (Reuter) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee, said Wednesday that in spite of the risks involved, sports could not be divorced from politics.

He was speaking here at a ceremony during which members of IOC and the National Olympic Committees met formally as a prelude to their two-day meeting which opens today.

Foreshadowing the discussions, Lord Killanin said: "I am sure we will have political discussions because politics is linked with sports."

The IOC boss said he looked forward to the closest co-operation between the various national organizations and their governments because sports could exist independently.

"We have a moral duty to support this," he said. But, he warned: "There is also the risk that the freedom of sportsmen might be in danger."

Canucks Try on Some Glass Slippers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks are trying desperately to produce a Cinderella finish to what has been a disappointing National Hockey League season.

The Canucks, losers only once in their last 12 games, trail third-place Minnesota North Stars by one point in the fight for the last playoff berth in the Smythe Division.

Vancouver coach Orland Kurtenbach has tried to remain calm during the last month of the season, saying the team members need to make their own breaks and "we can't count on anybody beating Minnesota for us."

The North Stars have three games left, all on the road, and the Canucks two, both at the Pacific Coliseum.

Minnesota plays Detroit Red Wings tonight, Los Angeles Kings on Saturday and the Canucks Sunday. Vancouver plays last-place Colorado Rockies on Friday.

Should the North Stars win their next two games, Sunday's final game of the schedule will be meaningless. But if Minnesota loses once and the Canucks defeat Colorado, the game Sunday will be for a playoff berth.

This is Vancouver's seventh season in the NHL and the Canucks were pre-season favorites to finish first in the league's weakest division, ahead of St. Louis and Chicago.

General manager Phil Maloney, who doubled as team coach, had guided the Canucks to first and second-place finishes the previous two seasons. Maloney said he thought the Canucks were strong enough to win their division again.

Maloney had, however, shipped out a number of veterans during the off-season: goaltender Gary Smith was traded to Minnesota for Cesare Maniago; centre Andre Boudrias, defenceman Gregg Boddy, winger Paulin Bordeleau and goaltender Ken Lockett were sold to World Hockey Association teams, and defenceman, Tracy Pratt was sold to Colorado.

After a disastrous season start when the team played eight of its first 11 games on the road, Maloney started to make changes.

Right winger Hilliard Graves and defenceman Larry Carriere were acquired from Atlanta in exchange for winger John Gould. Defenceman Bob Dalley was sent to Philadelphia for two more defenders—Larry Goodenough and Jack McIlhargey. Centre Ralph Stewart and defenceman Dave Fortier were purchased from New York Islanders and centre Derek Sanderson from St. Louis Blues.

Only Dennis Kearns and Harold Snepsts remained from the seven defencemen who started the season with the team.

Maloney stepped down as coach Dec. 22 with a 9-23-3 record and brought in Kurtenbach, the team's captain in 1970, from Tulsa of the Central Hockey League.

The Canucks continued to play poorly until early this month when they began to play a tight-checking brand of hockey which produced a late kick at a playoff berth.

The Canucks are 15-18-10 under Kurtenbach.

Kearns and Maniago have been the key players in the last month, supplying leadership to a team which sorely lacked initiative earlier in the season.

Maniago, 38, has started the last 19 games and lowered his goals-against average to a respectable 3.31.

Kearns, 31, has 57 points, the most ever by a Vancouver defenceman, breaking the record he shared with Dale Tallon.

Reds Withdraw Offers to Rose

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Calling it "a battle on the fans' behalf," Cincinnati Reds general manager Dick Wagner said Wednesday the club will not bow to the opening day contract deadline issued by holdout Pete Rose.

Rose, the 10-time all-star who has virtually rewritten the Reds' record book, announced at a news conference Tuesday he was raising his demands by $25,000 a month if an agreement is not reached by next Wednesday.

"There's no way we'll pay Pete Rose $400,000," said Wagner, rejecting Rose's ultimatum as the celebarted baseball salary dispute reached new heights.

Wagner said baseball is in jeopardy if "an average player or a great player should be able to decide his own compensation."

"If he (Rose) wants to do that perhaps he should buy the ball club and run it himself," Wagner said.

"We have a club to run. We have to pay the bills. We have to look at what's going to happen to the present roster and our future roster and also to the fan," he said.

"This is partially a battle on the fans' behalf because if we can't operate our club; if one individual can come in and say I'm going to get this because of 50 different reasons loosely tossed out; if we can't decide our own payroll and our own destiny, then our game is in real jeopardy," Wagner said.

Rose is embittered over past contract hassles with the club and the Reds' reluctance to recognize him as one of the game's top drawing cards. He is seeking $400,000 a year. The Reds made an initial offer of $250,000 a year, but are reported to have offered $325,000 in recent weeks.

BOOKIES ARE BETTING IT'S REDS AND YANKS

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — With a little more than a week before the start of the baseball season, the bookmakers here are betting that the 1977 world series will be a repeat of last year's match-up between New York Yankees and Cincinnati Reds.

According to the Delmar Sports Book, the Yanks are even money favorites to take the American League crown while the Hollywood Sports Book makes the New Yorkers a 4-5 choice.

In the National League, the Delmar book makes the Reds a 6-5 favorite for the pennant while the Hollywood Book makes the odds 4-5.

Not surprising to any seasoned bettor are the odds being offered on the pennant chances of the expansion Seattle and Toronto American League clubs.

Both books checked Tuesday are giving the bettor both teams for the price of one. The Hollywood Book lists the odds at 500-1, the Delmar book at a whopping 1000-1.

Wales Wins

By The Canadian Press

Wales moved into the lead in qualifying Group 7 for the 1978 World Cup soccer finals in Argentina with a 3-0 win over Czechoslovakia at Wrexham, Wales, on Wednesday.

Ino ther games Wednesday, the Republic of Ireland beat France 1-0 at Dublin and England trounced Luxembourg 5-0 before 81,000 fans at Wembley Stadium. Liam Brady scored the only goal for Ireland after 10 minutes of the first half.

And in Auckland, Australia played to a 1-1 draw with host New Zealand to win the Oceania Zone qualifying tournament with seven points from four games. New Zealand had five points and Taiwan none. Australia advances against the Asian Zone winner.

Saanich Edged

CASTLEGAR — Geoff Murdoch did more than his share but Saanich Braves still dropped a 5-4 decision to Prince George in the eight-team, round-robin British Columbia midget hockey championship tournament here Wednesday.

Murdoch came up with some excellent goaltending and turned aside 62 shots for Saanich, which now has a 1-3 record.

Noulette Joins National Squad

Daryl Noulette of James Bay Athletic Association has become the fifth Vancouver Island Rugby Union player to be named to a 21-man Canadian side.

Canada will play the United States in the inaugural North American championship at 2:30 p.m. May 21 in Burnaby's Swangard Stadium.

Noulette joins clubmates Hans de Goede, Mick Eckardt and Casey Walt as well as Gary Grant of UVik Vikings on the national side.

The Canada XV will also play an Island Union representative side May 17 at Royal Athletic Park; and Ottawa team June 7 at Ottawa; and an English under-23 side June 4 at Ottawa and June 11 in Toronto.

RULES TOUGHENED

Island Open Starts Sunday

Officials of the Victoria District Golf Committee are taking a tougher stand in their struggle to reduce problems caused by golfers failing to appear for tournament dates.

Starting with Sunday's qualifying round of the annual Vancouver Island Open tournament, there will be a penalty for unannounced absenteeism.

District officials have stated that this season any contestant who, without prior notification to tournament organizers, does not show for his scheduled starting time will be automatically disqualified from all VDGC events for the balance of the year.

Another "must" for Island Open entrants is possession of BCGA handicap cards, which must be presented to the starter no later than the start of the second round.

Otherwise, the Island Open will procede as usual, opening with an 18-hole qualifying round Sunday at Victoria Golf Club and continuing at match play each Sunday at different courses until the May 1 final at Gorge Vale.

Absent from this year's field of 120 is Cec Ferguson, winner of the title as an amateur in the past two years, who is currently playing on the American Golf Tour.

Among the 12 professionals slated to start in the title scramble is four-time champion Bill Wakeham.

Whitecaps Sign Aide, Southampton Striker

VANCOUVER (CP) — Holger Osieck, 28, of West Germany has been named assistant coach of Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League.

Osieck, who played professionally in the German second division, had been coaching at the amateur level in Germany before accepting the Vancouver position offered by manager John Best and coach Eckhard Krautzun.

Osieck, who speaks fluent English, will handle scouting and coaching duties with Canadian national team in addition to assisting Krautzun with the Whitecaps, who formed the nucleus of the national side that last December reached the second round of World Cup play.

Whitecaps also have announced the signing of striker Tony Runnel, 19, who scored nine goals in 12 games this season with Southampton of the English League's second division.

Funnell will report prior to the April 17 game against San Jose in Vancouver. The Caps open their regular season at home on April 8 against Portland Timbers.

COMEBACK THOUGHTS BY JENKINS

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Ferguson Jenkins, the 33-year-old veteran right-hander of Bostin Red Sox whose baseball career was threatened by a torn Achilles' tendon last September, is thinking now of another 20-victory season.

"With an injury-free season, I hope to be able to pitch the way I did two or three years ago," Jenkins, a Chatham, Ont., native, said Wednesday after being named to pitch the 1977 American League season-opener against Cleveland next Thursday at Boston.

Three years ago, while with Texas Rangers, Jenkins led the American League with 25 victories.

Trophy Series Starts Monday

9:30 a.m.—B. Fiddess, M. McLean, F. Chapman.
9:37 — J. Woodruff, E. Thompson, E. Wondra.

Three to Join Team Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Dallas Smith, who left Boston Bruins two months ago to reconsider his future in professional hockey, has agreed to join the Canadian team for the 1977 world hockey championships at Vienna in April.

Alan Eagleson, Team Canada chairman, said Wednesday that Smith, along with defenceman Carol Vadnais and forward Rod Gilbert of New York Rangers, would be joining the Canadian team when the current National Hockey League season ends.

Vadnais, approached to join the team when the Rangers were mathematically eliminated from the playoffs, said originally he had previous commitments during the time the team would be preparing for the world championships.

"Carol has been able to get his affairs in order and now will be available to use for the championships," Eagleson said.

He said Gilbert, the Rangers' all-time scoring leader, hadn't been included in the original cast "because we understood he wouldn't be available."

"But I had a talk with Rod on Tuesday and he is really enthused about joining the team," Eagleson added. "These three veterans will be a big help with all the rookies we have."

SURGERY FOR FIDRYCH

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Detroit Tigers pitcher Mark (The Bird) Fidrych is scheduled to undergo surgery today at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit to repair damaged cartilage in his left knee. The severity of the injury was confirmed Wednesday at the hospital after a medical examination. The Tiegrs said they hope Fidrych will be able to start baseball workouts in six to eight weeks.

VICTORIA PRESS LIMITED P.O. BOX 300, VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA V8W 2N4

Dear Advertiser:

Sometimes you use humour in your advertisements. You do it because often a light touch can be the very attention-getting device you need to show your product or service to best advantage.

The news we publish often has its light side too; funny things that happen to people in their everyday lives, odd turns-of-event that bring the human touch to the business of living by making us laugh.

But when it comes to our circulation figures, we're very serious. Any publication can claim circulation but some have to prove it.

We are members of the Audit Bureau of Circulations and as members have to submit to an annual audit to prove that we did in fact sell every paper we claim.

Therefore, when the Colonist and the Times claim that between them they have an average daily circulation of over 70,000 that means over 70,000 copies were paid for and delivered to the homes of subscribers or were purchased by readers from news boys or girls or from newsstands. We have to prove that to an international auditor.

We can't claim as paid circulation any papers that are distributed and not sold.

So, when anyone in our advertising sales department claims that we have a circulation of over 70,000 daily that means that 70,000 people paid hard cash to read the Colonist or the Times.

If you are an advertiser, that's important because you know your ad really is getting to someone who wants to read a newspaper.

Sincerely,

H. L. Alexander,
Advertising Director.

Inventor's Path a Tangle of Bureaucratic Red Tape

By PHIL McCOMBS
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A man named Albert Csonka has invented a better carburetor that federal officials say could potentially save millions of gallons of gasoline in this energy-hungry nation.

Csonka, however, has run into frustrating bureaucratic roadblocks in getting assistance funds from a federal program created specifically by Congress to encourage non-nuclear energy research by tapping the vast inventive resources of individual Americans like Csonka.

His frustrations were such that they prompted the following candid self-criticism from one government official involved. "The government is not, literally, set up to deal directly with individuals as we deal with Boeing, or Douglas or someone with a Washington office," said Richard K. Sutz, director of the environmental research and development administration's inventor program. "A guy from Boeing can come in twice a day. They know the words to use. It's a matter of grantsmanship."

"ERDA is not set up to deal with small people," he said. Csonka says that the big auto manufacturers haven't been helpful either, although Ford and Chrysler at least say they're interested.

Csonka's tale has a classic appeal — the small individual with a bright idea working alone against great odds. The story also provides glimpses into an area of federal energy policy that may or may not be working as well as it might.

Csonka has been lucky in several respects. Of 4,278 inventions submitted to the National Bureau of Standards energy-related invention evaluation program since its inception in early 1975, Csonka's is one of only 22 that NBS has forwarded to the U.S. energy research and development administration for possible funding.

And the 77-year-old former Hungarian refugee has won, with his brilliance and considerable old-world charm, several supporters within the bureaucracy itself.

Sutz, who is in a position to approve funds for Csonka, described Csonka as "a winner" who with continued luck and pluck may emerge as "a major carburetor manufacturer" in the United States.

ERDA has not yet decided to fund Csonka's project, however. The agency has asked the inventor for management and marketing plans to indicate how the new carburetors would reach the public.

The energy-related invention program was established under the Federal Nonnuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974 — a comprehensive national program co-ordinated by ERDA.

If an invention passes muster with the NBS technical evaluators, ERDA can turn it down as economically unfeasible, or choose to fund it or aid the inventor in some other way such as by providing management or marketing advice.

Csonka, who has been working with his 79-year-old brother on a shoestring budget at home in Buffalo, N.Y., and in a college laboratory, applied for federal aid more than a year and a half ago.

Sutz conceded that Csonka's submission "just got lost" in the ERDA offices and has "taken more time than it should have."

Sutz, formerly an inventor himself who has been in government only a year, said he is wrestling with the huge ERDA bureaucracy to speed things up.

Sutz said he was come under pressure from Congress to eliminate the delays for small inventors who are applying to ERDA and that all of this pressure has produced "a hell of a bureaucratic learning curve. We're improving, but not really as fast as the inventors or I would like."

Csonka, full of energy came to Washington last week to confer with officials and see if he couldn't push his invention along a bit.

"For six months our papers were lying in the file," he said with a smile. "Eight copies, six pounds of papers! No one took it in their hands!

I don't want to blame anybody, I just want to say to ERDA and to Mr. Schlesinger and Mr. Carter, "Gentlemen, you have lost half a year! By now we should have a carburetor that can be put on the car."

Csonka is no stranger to carburetors, the part of an engine that mixes gasoline with air and then sends the mixture into the cylinders for combustion.

His father, a university mechanical engineer, invented one of the world's first carburetors in Budapest in 1891 and went on to become one of the leading pioneers of the Hungarian engine and automobile industries.

In most carburetorrs, there is a rushing air current into which a stream of gasoline is introduced. The gas is thus atomized into tiny droplets mixed with the air.

Csonka's new "micro-carburetor" differs in that the rush of air is much faster — nearly the speed of sound — and instead of one gasoline stream the gasoline is fed into the air stream through 720 tiny holes...

The result, according to the NBS evaluation, "insures optimum fuel vaporation and evaporation. Consequently the air fuel mixture resulting is extremely uniform and the fuel is fully vapirized throughout the intake manifold and delivered uniformly to all cylinders."

The gasoline is burned more efficiently and less is spewed out in the form of undesirable emmissions, according to the report.

In layman's terms, as Csonka explained it, ordinary carburetors atomize the gasoline into big drops and little drops and some cylinders receive a lean mix and some a rich mix — all leading to wasteful operation. In his micro-carburetor, all cylinders receive a "perfectly uniform fog" of the air-gasoline mixuture, he said.

In laboratory tests in Buffalo on a Buick engine, Csonka reported gasoline savings of 20 per cent or more.

The NBS evaluation, which leaned in part on the opinion of Professor David Naegeli of Princeton's Aerospace Propulsion Laboratories, concluded that the micro-carburetor "should in principle provide (20 per cent) better fuel economy and reduce emissions." Dr. Naegeli wrote that in his opinions, "the micro-carburetor is an excellent device as it stands."

Sidney Weiser, the NBS staff man who evaluated the invention — although without conducting any direct tests on it — estimated an annual savings of 151 million gallons of gasoline should the micro-carburetor be installed on 1 per cent of the 1 7 million cars in the U.S. An additional 1.2 billion gallons would be saved, he estimated, if the carburetors were installed on the 8.5 year.

Csonka said he aproached major car manufacturers and was told by General Motors that "they were not interested in outside carburetors . . . they don't want to pay royalties." He said that Chrysler and Ford are "interested but they want to have it built and tested" before making any decisions.

GM spokesman Frank Faraone said the company, which manufactures its own carburetors in Rochester, N.Y., reviewed Czonka's material and decided "We had no need to purchase any rights . . . We had no use for any development work on it. I really can't say if we've done the same thing ourselves."

Chrysler spokesman Richard Muller said his company reviewed Csonka's material and has requested further test data ."Of course the corporation is interested in the design but would like to see some operational test data," he said.

Ford spokeswoman Barbara Mansfield said Ford officials have been talking with Csonka and "have told him that his carburetor may infringe on the Dresserator carburetor" — another type of carburetor. NBS officials discount that possibility, however.

Csonka said he has applied for a patent on his micro-carburetor but has not yet received it.

INTRODUCING AN ENERGY SAVINGS AND FINANCE PLAN FOR YOUR HOME

THE SAVINGS:

Every home deserves proper insulation. Because when your insulation meets modern requirements, you save energy. And during these times of increased concern about energy shortages, it's more important than ever that we all learn to use our energy resources wisely.

And, closer to home, when you save energy — you save money. While actual savings vary with individual circumstances, we know that when home insulation meets modern standards, fuel bills don't mount up as quickly.

And with the prospect for higher prices for energy, fuel and even insulation material in the future, an investment in proper insulation for your home today is a good hedge against inflation tomorrow.

Last, but hardly least, a well-insulated home is simply a more comfortable place to live. All year long. It's cozier in the winter, and cooler in the summer.

THE FINANCING:

From April 1, to Sept. 30, 1977, B.C. Hydro will provide up to $500.00 to up-grade the insulation in your home. As long as your home has already been built. Our Energy Savings and Finance Plan does not apply to homes currently under construction.

The interest rate is only 10%, repayable over 24 months with your regular utility bills.

To qualify, you must:

- have a residential electric and/or gas account with Hydro.
- own your own home, or be in the process of purchasing it through a mortgage or agreement for sale.
- have a satisfactory credit rating.

Major insulation retailers and contractors are participating in our Energy Savings and Finance Plan to ensure you of a proper job. Or, if you're handy, you can do the work yourself. In either case, you must agree to bring insulation up to the recommended "R" values. For example, an insulation value of at least R28 for ceilings, and R12 for walls.

All insulation must be recognized as standard insulation material. And all "do-it-yourselfers" must purchase enough insulation to achieve the required R value for their particular home. For complete details on the B.C. Hydro home insulation finance plan, contact your participating insulation retailer, or contractor, or your local B.C. Hydro office.

KITCHENER MAN SLIDE VICTIM

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A skier killed Wednesday in an avalanche near Lake Louise in Banff National Park is an unidentified 22-year-old man from Kitchener, Ont., an area police spokesman said.

Park Superintendent Andy Anderson said two persons were skiing together near a major ski run when one of them was caught by the avalanche and carried into some trees.

Anderson said it is believed the victim died of a broken neck.

It was the 11th fatality in avalanches in the Canadian Rockies this winter and the second in four days.

Shirley Louise Olvier, 31, of Cranbrook, B.C., died Sunday and four others were injured in a snow slide that swept down on 25 cross-country skiers in the Citadel Pass about 15 miles west of Banff.

FIRST GIRL in the history of scouting in Canada to receive the Queen's Venturer award, Kathleen Mary Kenyon, 17, of Shawnigan Lake receives congratulations from Lt. Governor Walter Owen following presentation at Government House Wednesday while fellow award winners David Fisher and Bill Nenninger of Burnaby look on. To receive top award in Venturers' section, scouter must perform extensive service to public and scouting movement. Among 22 honored Wednesday were Timothy Shepherd and Clifford Smith of Victoria. 'Bullied' Metis Won't Go

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — A native trapping community here is being bullied into moving by this oil-boom town, Stan Daniels, president of the Metis Association of Alberta, claimed Wednesday.

He said the town and a construction company building high-rise apartments for oil sands workers are trying to get a settlement of 15 families to leave their homes. The town and the company deny the bullying charge.

A 13-storey high-rise is going up a few feet away from the native families, whose back doors open onto the Snye River. And an eight-foot-high board fence was erected to separate the construction site from the settlement.

"The fence is an insult to these people," Daniels said.

"They have been subjected to disgraceful bullying. The company blocked off the route to let garbage trucks through.

"Authorities hope the natives will move away quietly. But there has been a native community on the banks of the river as long as there have been people in this area."

Trapper Michel Gladue, 70, ane his wife Christine, 62, said they don't want to move even though their house has no inside tailet or running water.

"We have lived here so long we would hate to move now," said Michel, who traps fox, beaver and lynx. "I was born in this area."

Widow Harriet Foley, 76, who lives alone in a one-room cabin, said: "I don't know anything about having to move. I would hate it. They would have to carry me away."

Daniels said negotiations to relocate the natives have been going on with the town and the provincial government for two years but nothing has come of them.

He said he was told the settlement was on Crown property but he thought the community had aboriginal rights to the land.

"The provincial government and the town are both well aware of the situation and have been dragging their heels, to put it mildly," he said. "If any attempt is made to evict these people there will be many standing with them."

Mayor Chuck Knight said the settlement was on a road allowance and the people could be termed squatters.

But Knight acknowledged many of the natives had lived on their present sites for years and the town had a responsibility to the group. He said any question of aboriginal rights is a federal government matter.

Knight dismissed any claims of bullying as nonsense and said the provincial government has agreed to provide mobile homes and service lots for the natives — but it had come down to a question of land.

"The natives have indicated they are willing to co-operate and we feel they must have land near their present location to enable them to carry on using their boats and dogs to get to trap lines.

"But private developers own most of the downtown land and the provincial government owns all the land on the town's perimeter.

"We would like to see the province swap some land for a suitable site. The next move is up to the government."

Gordon Thomas, executive assistant to the provincial native affairs minister, said his department, the housing department, the town and the Metis association discussed the issue in the spring of 1976.

"It was decided the town would identify a suitable location for these people with the help of the Metis association," he said.

"The department of housing and public works was to supply trailers. We are still waiting to hear where the land is and when the move is to be made. The onus is on the municipality."

Northward Developments are building the 141-apartment tower next to the settlement to house Syncrude Canada Ltd.

Saccharin Ban to Court

DEODORANT SPRAYS A HEALTH HAZARD?

TORONTO (CP) — A team of U.S. researchers has found new evidence indicating the principal ingredient in deodorant sprays may be a health hazard, a conference on toxicology has been told.

And rats exposed to extreme:y high concentrations also showed signs of pneumoia, high levels of aluminium in the lungs and loss of weight compared with normal rats.

The findings were released by Dr. F. L. Cavender and Dr. Willliam Busey, who conducted the tests for the U.S. government's national institute of environmental health safety.

Busey said rats exposed to amounts of aluminum chlorhydrate at levels closer to what a typical person might absorb when using deodorant sprays also showed early signs of lung problems.

"I'm not saying that what we have found means that we should get all deodorant sprays off the market yet," Busey said in an interview.

"But deodorant sprays should cause no change at all in anything's lungs. The deodorants are a cosmetic, they're not an essential product."

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — A Louisisana diabetic has filed suit in federal court to block the U.S. Food and Drug Administration's proposed ban on saccharin because the government refuses to ban cigarettes, which also have been linked to cancer.

The class action suit was filed in federal district court by Catherine Machen of Slidell, La. Her husband, Richard Machen, is an attorney.

"In singling out saccharin for removal from the market, the FDA is guilty of arbitrarily banning a substance while allowing a more dangerous one to remain on the street," her suit said.

"The FDA's aim of reducing cancer is not substantially advanced by such an arbitrary selection of the means."

An FDA spokesman said the suit probably was the first of its kind in the U.S. However, the spokesman said Mrs. Machen had no grounds for suit because the ban on saccharin was only a proposal.

Mrs. Machen said she can't live a normal life without saccharin. Removal of the artificial sweetner from grocery shelves and restaurants will cause her undue hardship, the suit said.

"My wife gets real dizzy and weak and she is instructed by the doctor not to take any sugar," Machen said. "I wonder if they think these things out all the way before they pass them.

"I decided to file the suit because it's in the family and we won't incur any big legal fees," he said. "The main reason is my wife's health."

Squash Club Gets Okay For Centre

DUNCAN — Cowichan Squash Club has been given approval to build a $150,000 centre at the western boundary of Rotary Park, south of the parking lot adjacent to McAdam Park.

Club officials met aldermen last week and ironed out earlier problems about the club's use of public land.

"It's important to note this property was given to the city by the Rotary Club for development and the club supports the squash club proposal," said Ald. Doug Barker.

Signal Wires Checked As Inquest Adjourned

An inquest into the death of two persons in a two-car collision at Trans-Canada Highway and Millstream last month was adjourned Wednesday to April 27.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre ordered the adjournment to permit completion of police laboratory tests in Vancouver.

Police are examining the wires in a lamp standard, toppled in the crash, in hopes of determining whether the light at the intersection was green for highway traffic or on Millstream at the time of the accident early Feb. 10.

Taxi driver William McLean and his passenger Gustav Becker died after being hit broadside by a car driven by Dennis Sharp, 18, of Duncan.

Sharp and two passengers, Ronald Boxem, 19, and Charles Harrison, 19, escaped with minor injuries.

Truck driver William Corlett, who arrived at the scene minutes after the accident, testified he travelled through the intersection twice a day and the green light for Millstream was erratic.

He said the light sometimes changed so quickly it was almost impossible for two cars to clear the intersection before the light changed. Other times four or five cars would have no trouble getting through.

. . . key speaker

Lions Clubs from B.C. and Washington meet Saturday, Sunday and Monday in Esquimalt Sports Centre for their District 19 spring conference.

Esquimalt Lions Club is host of the event which will feature key speaker Edwin H. Flood, of Amarillo, Tex., who is international director of Lions and has been cited for his contributions to world service.

Lions from 48 clubs representing 1,677 members in Vancouver island and the Olympic Peninsula will be led by district governor Jerry E. Medcalf, of Mayne Island

Duncan Favors Juvenile Curfew

DUNCAN — A recent citywide questionnaire conducted by an alderman indicates residents are in favor of imposing a curfew on juveniles.

Ald. Mike Coleman said 69 per cent of those responding supported a curfew to overcome what many feel is uncontrolled vandalism.

But he noted another 72 per cent suggested some program should be established to involve the youth more in civic affairs.

The questionnaire which sought opinions on a number of issues also showed that 86 per cent believed property taxes are fair.

Water services were seen as excellent by 56 per cent and good by 40 per cent.

Lagoon Outfall Considered Safe

A University of Victoria biology team has concluded that the proposed Esquimalt Lagoon outfall would not "normally exceed" the pollution levels imposed by the B.C. Pollution Control Branch.

Ellis said a 1,200-foot outfall would be sufficient to disperse the sewage.

Ellis had formally objected to the proposal because there had been no impact study.

He decided to do the study himself, as part of a training program with three marine biology graduate students.

Ex-Lumberman Dies

The man who launched B.C. trees into the air war against Hitler has died while visiting Honolulu.

Robert J. Filberg, 87, of Courtenay, was one of the early railway loggers on Vancouver Island and a former director of Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd.

During the Second World War he was in charge of Sitka spruce production for the purpose of making light plywood for the de Havilland Mosquito bomber, one of the fastest pre-jet combat aircraft.

Filberg worked or resided in the Comox Valley most of his life, having gone there when the Comox Logging and Railway Co. began, and staying with it after it became a Crown Zellerbach operation.

Filberg died last Saturday and a memorial mass and cremation was conducted in Honolulu Tuesday. A second memorial service will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. in Canadian Martyr's Church, Courtenay.

Survivors are four grandchilden and two great-grandchildren.

Rodet's famous Côtes Du Rhone now in B.C.

The House of Antonin Rodet has been serving excellent wines to the old world for more than a century. But, until recently, most North Americans knew Rodet wines only by reputation.

Now, however, B.C. wine fanciers have the opportunity to experience Rodet quality at first hand. For Rodet's illustrious Côtes Du Rhone is gradually making its appearance on the shelves of B.C. liquor stores.

The classic Côtes Du Rhone is a full bodied red, with a forthright flavour that sides well with roast beef, steak and other hearty foods. And Rodet Côtes Du Rhone splendidly exemplifies these characteristics.

Try Rodet Côtes Du Rhone soon. A few bottles in your cellar or cabinet will stand you in good stead when company arrives, or when you feel like turning an everyday meal into an occasion.

WCB PAYOUTS TOTAL $111.7M

The Workers' Compensation Board paid out $111.7 million in claims in 1976, an increase of 6.6 per cent over 1975.

The annual report shows total expenditure for the board for 1976 was $165.6 million and total income was $175 million, leaving the WCB $9.4 million to add to its funds.

However, an acturial study contained in the report shows that funds available to the board to pay future claims are still below the level they should be.

The actuaries suggest a surcharge on assessments to cover future unfunded liabilities.

Tariffs Played Down

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced steps Wednesday to encourage Canadian manufacturers to use anti-dumping legislation, rather than tariff and quotas, as protection against low-price foreign imports.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald and Revenue Minister Monique Begin said procedures are being revised with the intention of speeding up anti-dumping tribunal hearings and decisions.

Dumping occurs when foreign goods are sold to Canadian importers at prices lower than the normal value in the country of origin. Domestic manufacturers often say such imports hurt their industry through unfair competition.

Under the changes, decision on whether a formal investigation should be made under the Anti-Dumping Act would be made within 30 days of receipt of an adequately documented complaint from Canadian manufacturers, a news release said.

Investigations following complaints would then be completed within six months, it added.

In the past, manufacturers have complained that tribunal investigations are slow, with the result that their industry is hurt more by cheap imports than if quick conclusions were drawn.

Gas Find False?

OTTAWA (FP) — The encouraging signs of a major gas accumulation in the Beaufort Sea that a subsidiary of Dome Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary had thought it had tapped last fall in one of its northern exploratory wells now seem at least to be inconclusive, and possibly a false alarm.

According to a federal government report on the 1976 Dome drilling experience in the Beaufort Sea, a high-pressure zone encountered in the Tingmiark well close to 10,000 feet level "is thought to have been from a gas zone which quickly depleted to a water flow."

The federal report, made public by the Canadian Arctic Resources Committee at a news conference Wednesday, adds that the indication of formation overpressure at the bottom of the Tingmiark well is "inconclusive" in terms of gas prospects.

Two-Licence Fishing Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — A one-year delay in a federal two-licence plan for British Columbia commercial salmon fishermen was announced Wednesday by Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc in the Commons.

LeBlanc told government backbencher Jack Pearsall, who represents the B.C. coastal riding of Coast-Coquitlam that he has instructed his officials to begin another round of "exhaustive negotiations with all components of the industry."

The two-licence program was to have started April 15 and would have restricted trollers to offshore areas and the smaller net fishermen to the inner waterways.

LeBlanc also told the Commons that he wants assurance from his officials that a licencing program for sport fishermen would not become a bureaucratic nightmare.

Outside the House, LeBlanc said the two-licence plan for commercial fishermen was the outgrowth of attempts "to share the fish more equally . . . there's not enough fish."

Because the owner of a large trolling vessel faces high operating costs, he wants the vessel to fish as much as possible which often meant it worked in areas usually frequented only by the smaller net operators.

LeBlanc said he hopes to have a report from his officials by the end of the year.

MEXICAN JAIL PACT SOUGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The government knows of 15 Canadians in Mexican penitentaries and is negotiating to get them back to Canada, Solicitor-General Francis Fox said Wednesday in the Commons.

Fox told Eldon Woolliams that Canada is negotiating with Mexican authorities to sign a prisoner-exchange agreement similar to the accord recently signed with the United States.

Plea for the Flag

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal public works department is aware of complaints that the Canadian flag is now flown from many federal buildings across Canada, especially in Quebec, the Commons learned Wednesday.

Alexandre Cyr, parliamentry secretary to Works Minister Judd Buchanan, said the complaints by some Liberal MPs have come to the department's attention.

He said the Canadian flag must be given the prominent position not only on federall-owned buildings but also on those rented by Ottawa.

He was replying to Albert Bechard (L — Bonaventure-Isles-de-la-Madeleine) who asked the department to send out directives "to correct this offensive situation."

How Your Garden Grows

Delectable vegetables

Anyone with a small patch of ground in a sunny location can enjoy an abundant crop of succulent, fresh vegetables. It's a matter of simple preparation, beginning in early spring.

In March or April, apply Green Valley Dolomite Lime to your garden area. This will overcome the acid soil conditions which prevail in our region. Then add Green Valley Flower & Vegetable Plant Food to provide essential nutrients, following this with an application of Green Valley Steer Manure or other organic matter, such as compost. Finally, spade or rototill the entire area to a depth of 6 to 8 inches.

In May, plant vegetable seeds in rows. Two weeks after germination, thin rows to recommended spacing. Two or three times during the growing season, apply supplementary nitrogen in the form of urea dissolved in water to the rows of leafy vegetables, such as lettuce and cabbage. For tomato plants use the specially prepared Green Valley Tomato Food.

Plants should be checked frequently for insects, and an appropriate insecticide used where needed. Once a week, water thoroughly, ideally with a soaker type hose. Finally, be sure to cultivate between rows regularly to eliminate weeds which compete with your vegetables for plant food and water.

Good gardening...and good eating!

Next 6 Months 'Challenge' Says Anti-Inflation Board

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada's inflation rate fell significantly during the first 18 months of the three-year wage and price control program, but the Anti-Inflation Board said the next six months will be challenging.

The controls were imposed in October, 1975, in a government attempt to lower the annual inflation rate to 6 per cent by October, 1976, 6 per cent in 1977 and 4 per cent in the final year of guidelines.

"By the first anniversary of the program, the increase in the Consumer Price Index was 6.2 per cent, substantially below at 10.6 per cent (annual rise) experienced a year earlier," the AIB said in a progress report Wednesday.

"These results, when compared to our first year's target . . . were very encouraging. More importantly, the rate of increase of non-food, non energy price has now clearly begun to fall.

"However, the latest CPI showed prices in February were up 6 per cent from a year earlier as mid-winter food prices were affected by weather problems in the southern U.S.

"The target for the second year of the anti-inflation program . . . remains a challenging one."

The AIB did not claim credit for the improvement, saying only "the anti-inflation program is now almost 1½ years old and since its inception inflation has come down in Canada.

"While there may be continued debate over the relative parts played by the anti-inflation guidelines and by other factors, including slackness in the economy, in bringing about the price moderation achieved so far, the central fact remains:

"All relevant indicators show that price and cost pressures have decreased."

The increase in unit labor costs in 1975 was held at 10 per cent, compared to the previous year's rate of 15.2 per cent.

Although the rate of increase in wage settlements declined, real incomes continued to rise because an even lower rate of inflation was achieved.

Corporate profits as a proportion of Gross National Product also declined, dipping to 10.1 per cent of GNP in 1976 from 11.5 the previous year.

GRIT PROVINCES SPLIT ON CONTROL PROGRAM

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Canada's two provincial Liberal governments are divided on the fate of the federal anti-inflation program.

Gerald Regan's Nova Scotia government believes that planning and careful post-controls structures must be developed before the controls are dropped. But Alex Campbell's Prince Edward Island government set a deadline Wednesday for scrapping the program.

Finance Minister Bennett Campbell, who tabled the P.E.I. government's record spending estimates Wednesday night, said he would like the controls dismantled before Jan. 1, 1978.

The budget calls for a 15.4 per cent increase in government spending this year, record borrowing of at least $30 million and a budget deficit, the first here in years, of $5.9 million.

To finance major building and make-work projects, the province has increased its capital spending budget by 50 per cent.

Keep PWA Plan Fails

The federal government has turned down British Columbia's latest request to prevent the Alberta government from moving the headquarters of Pacific Western Airlines to Alberta from B.C.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Wednesday the federal cabinet rejected an application from B.C. to restrain PWA, now owned by the Alberta government, from moving its head office to Calgary from Vancouver.

At the same time, Gardom said, Transport Minister Otto Lang turned down a B.C. request to conduct an inquiry into the impact the transfer would have.

"We very much regret this position," Gardom said, adding that B.C. is running out of options to try to prevent the move.

He said the provincial government will press Lang to change his mind and conduct the inquiry.

SALT BAN DOESN'T RULE OUT SPICES

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Q. I have always enjoyed both cooking and eating very spicy foods, including Mexican, Indian and certain tyupes of Chinese dishes, in particular. Now, I have hypertension, and the doctor has told me I must cut way down on my salt intake. Does this mean these foods must go?

A. On the contrary. There is a fairly popular misconception that anyone with hypertension should avoid spicy foods. While many spicy dishes may contain entirely too much sodium, it is possible to prepare a great variety of dishes that are perfectly acceptable. In fact, if your taste preferences run to very spicy food, learning to live with a sodium restricted diet should be relatively easy for you.

It is true that you will want to avoid such things as soy sauce, monosodium glutamate and smoked meats. Moreover, you will need to depend on fresh and some frozen foods without added sodium rather than on canned products (except those which are especially canned without salt). However, you can certainly prepare a wide variety of excellent dishes that are well within the limits of your diet.

Curries are, of course, popular Indian dishes; fortunately, blended curry powder is low in sodium. Moreover, curries are generally served with a variety of condiments, including such things as cucumbers, raisins, and unsalted nuts, all of which are fine. While the traditional bottled chutney may be too high in sodium, it is possible to home-prepare chutney that is quite low in sodium.

Finally, while you will need to eliminate the obviously salty ingredients in Chinese cooking, you can still prepare many dishes within the limits of your diet. If you have access to a store which sells Chinese groceries, you will find a great variety of items you can use, including many different types of noodles and a great variety of both fresh and dried vegetables. Hot mustard sauce and hot pepper oil, two seasonings easily prepared at home, are excellent low-sodium condiments.

Q. Are there any differences between cane and beet sugars?

A. No, not really. Both are sucrose. Cane sugar, of course, has been around much longer.

The cultivation of sugar spread quite slowly at first, reaching China around the 1st century B.C. and the Mediterranean much later, possibly in the 6th century A.D. In fact, it was the Crusaders who tasted what they called "honey from the reeds" and brought cane sugar back to Central and Western Euorpe.

The development of sugar plantations in tropical and semi-tropical countries, which began in the 16th century, made sugar far more plentiful (though still an expensive luxury) and spurred the tragic expansion of the slave trade.

During the mid-18th century Andreas Morgraf, a German chemist, first extracted sucrose from sugar beets. But it took the Napoleonic Wars, some 60 years later, to spark the commercial development of the sugar beets industry.

The advantage of sugar beets, which are a white root much larger than the familiar red vegetable, is that they can be grown in a temperate climate unlike sugar cane.

When the English blockades of European ports threatened a cutoff of West Indian cane sugar, Napoleon himself ordered the commercial planting of sugar beets and the building of factories to procees them. However, Waterloo and the lifting of the blockades dampened the development of the sugar beet industry. In fact, it did not become firmly established in Europe until the mid-19th century and somewhat later in this country.

At present, about 60 per cent of the world's sucrose comes from cane and 40 per cent from beets. But regardless of the source, it's still nothing more than empty calories.

Cheese to Everyone's Taste

Canadian cheddar cheese needs no introduction, but have you enjoyed the variety of flavors and textures found in some of the European type cheeses produced in Canada?

There are so many variety or gourmet cheeses now made in Canada you could try a different one nearly every week. Its easy to recognize the Canadian product because the package or wrapper will be marked with the name and location of the manufacturer.

Brick, which is sold today in brick shape, is soft and creamy-yellow inside and brown on the surface. Its mild flavored, open-textured, good for sandwiches, snacks and with fruits.

Camembert is creamy-white, with a grey-white mold surface. It has a creamy interior which may be almost fluid depending on the degree of ripeness. Its flavor is mellow and pungent and adds a distinctive note to a cheese tray.

Somewhat similar to mild cheddar is Colby, a pale yellow, mild flavored cheese. It comes in the form of a cylinder and is good both in sandwiches or on a cheese tray.

One unripened cheese is cream cheese, white, soft and creamy with a mild flavor. Flavor variations are also available.

Gouda is easily recognized because of its ball shape, wih flattened top and bottom and red waxed surface. It makes a colorful centerpiece for a cheese tray and has a mild nut-like flavor.

Oka, with its russet colored surface and creamy colored inside, has a full rich flavor and odor. Its excellent wih crackers and a good accompaniment to fruit.

Its important to select cheeses with varied textures and flavors. In case some guests are less adventurous, its always a good idea to serve the ever-popular medium cheddar as well. Most varieties of cheese will be at their best if set out at room temperature 30 minutes before serving time. Cream cheeses though, are best served cold.

Another delicious way of sampling various Canadian cheeses is to use them in hors d'oeuvres. Two interesting ideas from Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada are Cheese Stuffed Eggs and Miniature Towers.

CHEESE-STUFFED EGGS

6 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons butter, softened
2 teaspoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
¼ cup (1 ounce) grated old cheddar cheese
Salt and pepper
Dash Cayenne
Dash paprika

Cut eggs in halves lengthwise. Remove egg yolks. Mash and combine with butter and mayonnaise. Add cheese, salt, pepper and cayenne and mix until smooth. Stuff egg white halves. Sprinkle with paprika.

MINIATURE TOWERS

8 ounces cream cheese, softened
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
12 Slices bologna (about ½ pound)

Blend cheese and seasonings until smooth. Spread each of 3 slices of bologna with filling and stack. Top with slice of bologna. Make two additional towers with remaining bologna and cheese mixture. Chill 1 to 2 hours. Cut each tower in 16 wedges and garnish with slice of olive or pickle. Serve with a tooth pick. Makes 48 wedges.

FANCY PENMANSHIP WORTH A HEFTY HIKE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The city calligrapher's pay has been increased by more than $8,000 this year — to $31,048, equal that of an executive assistant to the mayor.

Calligrapher Raymond Kasten does the fancy penmanship that decorates the ceremonial scrolls warded by the mayor, city council, commissions and other city offices.

The city council approved the latest pay raise, by $3,132, because supporters of the raise said Kasten, who does not receive overtime pay, is working 60 hours a week to keep up with the demand for ornate scrolls.

Vitamin C Tested Again

CHICAGO (AP) — A new study by an Indiana University research team has concluded that large doses of Vitamin C help some—but not all—children in the recovery from and prevention of the common cold.

In the Journal of the American Medical Association, medical geneticist Judy Miller said no significant difference has been found in the number, duration and severity of colds in children given Vitamin C.

Mrs. Miller and her colleagues at the university's medical school in Indianapolis gave either Vitamin C or inert capsules to each of 18 male and 26 female pairs of tiwns aged six to 15 for five months. Not even mothers knew which twins were receiving which type of capsule.

The doses were 500, 750 or 1,000 milligrams a day, depending on each child's weight.

Mrs. Miller reported there was no significant over-all difference in the results, but girls in the youngest two age groups who were given Vitamin C had generally shorter and less severe illnesses than their twins. Illnesses were somewhat less severe in the youngest groups of boys given Vitamin C, she said.

An "entirely unexpected" outcome of the study, Mrs. Miller said, was that among the youngest male twins, the boy taking Vitamin C grew a half-inch more than his brother in the five months.

But Mrs. Miller cautioned that this result must be confirmed in further research before it can be accepted as fact.

In an earlier study, Toronto researchers found that persons taking large doses of Vitamin C had 30 per cent fewer colds. But in a subsequent study the same researchers found there was only a slight beneficial effect from taking the vitamin.

Apricot Loaf Fresh from B.C.

Mary Moore

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I have just made a loaf from a recipe I brought from B.C. A niece of mine had made it. It seems so good and different to any loaf I have had I thought you might enjoy it. Also it says to soak apricots 30 minutes. I brought my Sunripe Apricots (6-oz. package) from B.C. as I was sure I wouldn't be able to get them here. They were so soft soaking wasn't necessary. Hope you like it. Another Mary (Miniota, Manitoba).

ANSWER: Yes, Mary we tested and like it. Thank you. As you see we made the nuts optional. We liked it because it is more economical than most. Some call for a full cup of margarine so this has fewer calories too.

APRICOT LOAF

1 large egg
1 c. granulated sugar
2 tbsp. margarine
1 c. dried apricots, finely chopped (see note below)
¾ c. orange juice
2 c. unsifted all-purpose flour
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. baking soda
½ tsp. salt
1 c. chopped nuts (optional)

In beater bowl beat together egg, sugar and margarine. Fold in apricots. (NOTE: If your apricots are very dried out soak them for 30 minutes in warm water then drain and pat dry on paper towelling. If they are soft and moist chop and add to batter without soaking.) Add the orange juice and stir to combine.

Mix together flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt and add to creamed mixture beating until thoroughly blended and scraping sides of bowl with rubber scraper once or twice. Fold in nuts (if used). Pour into standard loaf pan, tripled-lined with buttered wax paper.

Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 55 to 60 minutes. Cool on cake rack for 30 minutes, remove from pan, peel off wax paper and let rest until thoroughly cool. Store in plastic bag. Freezes excellently.

Free For The Asking

Most Canadians who visit Italy delight in the native food. After they return, they try to duplicate some of their favourite dishes in their own kitchen, but lack the necessary know-how.

The 16-page booklet with "42 Delicious Italian Recipes" remedies this situation. It offers authentic Italian recipes, all of which have been kitchen tested. These range from pasta and sauces, salads and dressings, to main courses, vegetables and tantalizing desserts. Among the desserts are carrot fruit cake, vanilla chiffon cake, apple fritters and peach upside-down cake.

There are also some helpful cooking hints. For example, before you use meat or poultry in a casserole or stew, quickly brown it in some oil to seal in juices. To enhance the flavor of a meat loaf, add some grated cheese or canned tomatoes to the meat mixture. ture.

You will find tips for correct cooking with oil so that fried food can be served crisp and dry. According to the booklet, fried food, if properly prepared, is as digestible as boiled.

Esperanto: a Language of Love

elizabeth forbes

If you are guessing the above sentence is written in some obscure European or South American language, youre completely wrong.

As it happens its written in Esperanto, and translated it says 'come to the Easter Festival of flowers and Folk Arts.

What is Esperanto?

Initiated in Poland some 90 years ago, it spread rapidly throughout Europe, then around the world, until today it is taught and spoken in over 80 countries, including Japan, Korea, China, Vietnam, South America, United States and Canada.

Why is it described as an auxilliary language?

Du Temple says because it is not meant to eliminate other languages but rather to augment them.

He believes everyone should be fluent in an auxilliary language as well as their native one, and to prove that statement, he gives you a situation where two people meet and neither one knows or understands the others tongue.

"If those two had Esperanto they would not need to struggle with a few words of either native tongue. Right away they could talk to each other, easily and fluently."

Du Temple says that from the beginning Esperanto has embodied the international idea of friendship and love through understanding between all peoples and through that undertanding to serve others.

"The philosophy of love and friendship is part of our creed," he explains, "and we believe in serving and helping people because they are human beings in need and not because of where they live."

He then added "we have always been politically neutral . . . we never discuss politics."

The movement started in Canada in 1969 and the first Esperanto Club was formed in Regina, the following year.

At that time Du Temple was teaching in Ottawa and he heard about this auxilliary language and learned to speak it there, through a Hungarian Catholic priest who had received his lessons from a Sudanese man.

Returning to Victoria in 1971, Du Temple got in touch with Miss Emily Grundsteins, who was a delegate (member) of the Universal (world) Esperanto Association, and together they formed the local group, with five members.

Since then, more than 80 people in this area have been taught to speak Esperanto and the club membership now stands at a steady 40. (There are also clubs in Prince George, Dawson Creek, Vancouver and Nanaimo.)

Conversation circles are held here every Wednesday afternoon in the clubroom at 630 Fort Street. Social get-togethers are arranged once a month, where nothing but Esperanto is spoken.

At present, most of the teaching is done by Mrs. Alma More, who became involved quite by accident.

While taking French at Camosun College she read that an Esperanto course was starting and joined out of curiousity.

In her own words "it soon got to me . . . not only the spoken words but the philosophy."

Now she is teaching an Esperanto course at the college to a class that ranges in age from 21 to 70.

Easter weekend (April 8 to 10 inclusive) the Victoria group will be hosts to members from every province in Canada, gathered here for annual national convention.

And thats where the flower and folk festival I mentioned at the beginning of this column, comes in.

The program includes not only business and social gatherings but also this gala event in the Georgian Room at the Empress Hotel on Easter Friday from 1 p.m. to 11 p.m.

In the afternoon there will be exhibits of Easter customs and folk art, an Easter Bunny, an egg rolling contest and a flower arranging competition.

At night Tony Eng, the magician, will appear, and there will be ethnic dancing, a balalaika orchestra, local singers and a guitarist.

There is no charge in the afternoon but admission in the evening has been set at $1, with proceeds going to the Victoria Branch, Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Why the blind?

Because the initiator of the Esperanto movement, Ludivik Zamenhof of Poland, was an eye specialist, who some 90 years ago, had four travelling eye clinics working in eastern Africa from primitive Land Rovers, with the hope of curing trachoma — an external eye disease.

Looking back over the years since Esperanto was initiated, Du Temple sees it as having "steady growth."

He also believes it is "more or less miraculous" that this universal language has survived and grown, when all other attempts (approximately 60 of them he points out) have died on the paper they were written or with the first couple to speak them.

Right now the movement in this province has taken a big step forward with the department of education commissioning a correspondence course in Esperanto, that is now in course of preparation for the fall.

Postscript — If you have extra flowers in your garden, you could help the local Esperanto Club by donating some of them for that flower arranging competition on Good Friday afternoon. There will be someone in the Empress Hotel Georgian Room to accept them, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. that day.

Or perhaps youd like to make up an arrangement and take it in for the competition.

Dont hesitate . . . anyone is welcome to enter the contest.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RABB

DEAR READERS: This letter from a girl in Chicago speaks for itself and it's definitely the kind we love to get.

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: Hi! I'm 14 years old and have read your two books which really got me into the plant trip. I have 16 healthy, lively plants and I just completed a bottle garden for a school project and got an "A"! The only plant I've ever had trouble with is Peter, my piggyback, which I let dry out a couple of times causing it to droop. But I followed your advice, watered it thoroughly, and both times it popped right back up.

I don't know about the rest of the country, but more people here are sending and giving plants for gifts instead of flower bouquets. I'm thinking about buying a bonsai tree, but two things are stopping me: it costs $45 and I know that bonsai trees don't do well indoors. I play music to my plants and have found (I'm probably just imagining it) that my little ones like soft music while my bigger ones like hard rock. I'm writing this letter to thank you for helping me get started in one of the most exciting and rewarding experiences I've ever had — growing plants. — Sincerely, D. H.

DEAR D.H.: Thank you for writing us. Letters like yours give us the most satisfaction of all, because, as you know, we consider ourselves Missionaries of the Green and want everybody to share the same feelings about plants that you're getting. Thanks again.

Take Four Live Lobsters: Two Recipes

craig claiborne

NEW YORK (NYT) — People have always thought that lobster is too expensive. In 1885, The Lewiston (Me.) Evening Journal noted that fishermen were getting 10 cents a lobster, the public was paying only 10 to 12 cents a pound — and people were still complaining about high prices. Right now, lobsters are as inexpensive and as plentiful as they will probably be for the rest of the year. Hence, a pair of lobster dishes — lobster in cognac and cream sauce and lobster with tomatoes and tarragon, the latter to be served with spaghetti.

LOBSTER IN COGNAC AND CREAM SAUCE

4 live lobsters, about one and one-quarter pounds each
¼ cup olive oil
3 tablespoons finely chopped shallots or green onions
3 tablespoons finely minced garlic
2 tablespoons cognac
1½ cups chopped fresh or canned tomatoes
½ teapoon dried thyme
1 cup dry white wine
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 cup heavy cream.

1. Plunge a knife into each lobster where the body and tail section meet to sever the spinal cord. This will kill the lobster instantly. Break off the tail and set aside in a large bowl. Break off the large claws and add to the larger bowl. Cut off the small feeler claws and add to the bowl. Discard the tough sac near the eyes. Split the carcass in half widthwise.

2. Heat the oil in a deep, heavy skillet large enough to accommodate the lobsters. When the oil starts to smoke, add the lobster pieces. Cook, stirring, about five minutes and add the shallots, onion and garlic. Sprinkle with cognac. Add the tomatoes, thyme, wine, parsley and salt and pepper to taste, and cook, stirring, over high heat about one minute. Cover and cook 15 minutes.

3. Remove the tails and claws from the skillet and let them cool briefly.

4. Continue cooking the remainder of the ingredients and add the cream. Cook, uncovered, over high heat about 10 minutes to reduce the sauce.

5. Meanwhile, when the tails and claws are cool enough to handle, break or crack the tails and claws and remove the meat. Add the meat to the sauce along with any accumulated juices. Serve the lobster pieces in sauce, carcasses and all, with fluffy rice or buttered noodles.

Yield: Six to eight servings.

LOBSTER WITH TOMATOES AND TARRAGON

(For spaghetti)

3 live lobsters, about one and one-quarter pounds each
4 tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¼ cup olive oil
One-third cup finely diced onion
3 tablespoons finely minced shallots
½ teaspoon chopped garlic
One-third cup finely diced celery
¼ cup finely diced carrots
1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh tarragon or 2 teaspoons dried
2 tablespoons tomato paste
¼ cup cognac
One and one-third cups finely diced or chopped fresh or canned tomatoes
1 cup dry white wine.

1. Plunge a knife into each lobster where the body and tail section meet to sever the spinal cord. This will kill the lobster instantly. Save all juices that flow from the bodies. Break off the tail and cut crosswise into three pieces. Crack the claws. Discard the tough sac near the eyes. Split the carcass in half widthwise. Remove the lobster liver and coral and place in a bowl. Add two tablespoons of butter and set aside.

2. Sprinkle the lobster pieces with salt and pepper to taste.

3. Heat the oil in a large, heavy skillet or casserole and add the lobster pieces. Cook, stirring, about two minutes or until shells start to turn red. Add the onion, shallots, garlic, celery, carrots, half the tarragon and the tomato paste. Stir to blend and cover. Cook about three minutes. Flame with the cognac.

4. Add the tomatoes, any liquid from the lobsters and wine. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cover and cook about five minutes. Total cooking time should be about 10 misutes.

5. Remove the lobster pieces from the skillet. When cool enough to handle, remove the lobster meat from the tails and claws. Discard the shells. Cut the carcass pieces in half and set aside with the meat.

6. Blend the corals and livers with the butter and stir into the sauce. Bring to the boil over high heat. Put the sauce through a food mill, pressing to extract as much liquid as possible from the solids. Discard the solids. Return the sauce to the skillet and add the lobster pieces. Sprinkle with the remaining tarragon and swirl in the remaining butter. Serve with hot spaghetti.

Yield: Four to six servings.

Stomach Trouble In a Strange Place

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

Twice I've gone below the border on a holiday, and twice I've had my vacation ruined with severe abdominal cramps and diarrhea. Although I ate the same food that was eaten by the native friends I was visiting, they were unaffected by it. Can you explain this ? — Miss J.E., Calif.

Dear Miss E.:

It is well known that certain people can develop an immunity to the microbes that produce severe diarrhea in others. Newcomers to an area who have not developed such an immunity can be stricken with severe abdominal symptoms.

It is generally accepted that bouts of diarrhea such as you described are usually associated with contaminated water, poor sanitation, inadequate sewage disposal and carelessness about personal hygiene.

When one comes from a well-controlled, hygienic area and is exposed to toxic microbes and chemicals in a new environment, there are very specific rules to be followed.

Drink only bottled water. A hidden danger lies in ice that may be contaminated. Even brushing the teeth should be done with bottled water.

Avoid all raw fruits and vegetables. Lettuce is particularly hazardous because the soil on which it grows is so frequently contaminated. Fruits that can be peeled are considered safe to eat.

Tourists are often tempted by exotic native foods. Only the lucky ones seem able to manage this. In general, it is a safe rule to avoid these dishes.

Visitors should come prepared with one of the many drugs that are now available and prescribed by doctors. They can quickly check intestinal upsets.

Since you have had two unpleasant experiences, why not consider holidaying north of the border next time?

Is there a greater advantage to taking a vitamin by injection than by mouth? — Mr. E.A., Conn.

Dear Mr. A.:

In most instances, injections of vitamins are given when patients are unable to comfortably take them by mouth.

After an operation, or because of some intestinal disorder, vitamins and all other kinds of medication may, for a while, be given by injection.

In some instances, patients may have a special defect and an inability to absorb vitamins from the stomach or intestines. Here, too, injections are substituted.

The concentration of vitamins by mouth is often just as effective, and lasts just as long as vitamins by injection.

When complaining about a new or almost-new refrigerator, a hotwater heater or any appliance doesn't get a favorable response from the dealer or servicing agency, write to the manufacturer's address listed on the care booklet.

If you're in a hurry for a thick paper "log" to burn in the fireplace, open newspapers and spread them in a long line over the largest floor in the house — or the dry driveway. Overlap the ends by several inches. Then roll them up tightly. A week's supply of newspapers make a log thick enough to burn — when you place it, raw edges down, on hot coals — for an hour or so. This way you don't have to wait until soaked-paper logs dry out.

★ ★ ★

Keeping extra cozy with a portable heater? Never place it near anything that could burn. It may not appear that the heat could ignite anything, but the heater can dry out otherwise safe materials, making them highly flammable. How near is "near"? If a wall, carpeting or anything near the heater feel warm, you know the heat is drying it out.

Pork and Lamb ...For a Change

It's the little things in life that mean a lot and mealtime planning is no exception.

It doesn't take a big food budget to make sensational meals. Sometimes the less expensive dishes are the great delicious ones. B.C. Food Information has released another kitchen-tested recipe sheet containing economical, flavourful and nutritious food ideas. B.C. PORK & LAMB recipe pamphlet is available in most food stores in British Columbia.

Variety in your food menus is very important. You'll find recipes in the B.C. Pork and Lamb leaflet a welcome change from the more frequently featured beef and poultry dishes. Sample these for variety — "Hawaiian Spareribs, Gourmet Pork Chops, Italian Leg of Lamb and Savoury Lamb Stew", just to mention a few. Plan to serve these new meal suggestions to your family soon.

B.C. PORK

Although small in numbers, the B.C. pork industry is growing steadily. There are about 100 commercial producers in British Columbia, with major production in the Fraser Valley region. The average British Columbian eats about 60 pounds (or 27 kilograms) of pork per year. Seven hundred thousand hogs are needed to meet this demand, of which approximately 10% of the supply is provided by B.C. hog farmers.

Pork has good nutritional value, complete in protein. It is an excellent source of the B vitamins (thiamine, niacin), and good source of phosphorus and iron. Today's pork is bred to be lean, with little fat. Lean portions of pork contain about the same amount of calories as lean portions of other meat.

All cuts of pork are tender and should not be overcooked or they become dry. Pork is available in many forms — fresh, cured, pickled, smoked, fully cooked, canned and in ready-to-serve cuts.

B.C. LAMB

There are approximately 120 commercial lamb producers in our province. Most of the sheep are raised in the Peace River area, on the Gulf Islands and Vancouver Island and in the Fraser Valley. Some sheep are peared for wool, but the majority are raised for meat production. In 1976, 5,956 lambs were marketed by B.C. producers. Because the local market can not meet the consumer demand, lamb is also imported. Per capita consumption of lamb is between 2 and 4 pounds (or 0.9 and 1.3 kilograms).

Once considered a seasonal meat, fresh B.C. lamb is now available in limited quantities throughout the year. Supplies are most abundant from September to December. B.C. lamb has been improved through selective breeding and scientific feeding programs to produce heavier and leaner sheep. Due to the wide variety of breeds raised, B.C. lamb is marketed year round.

Lamb contains important nutrients and is a source of high quality protein. The Canadian lamb has a fine distinctive flavour.

This Dog Funeral Fit for a Person

DEAR ABBY: My friend's Chihuahua died, and I attended the funeral, and I've got to ask somebody if I've led a sheltered life or not. I'm 50 years old, and until this week I never knew they had funerals for dogs and cats.

My friend's dog (Jimmy) was buried in a satin-lined casket no bigger than a shoe box. (It cost $900.) Jimmy was laid out in the "slumber room," and a "minister" actually held a service for the dear departed dog. The "funeral" (sans casket) cost $500.

That's not all. Jimmy was driven out to the pet cemetery in a limousine just as deceased person would be. There were little tombstones all over the cemetery, and my friend says she is having one made for Jimmy to the tune of $850.

When I think of all the hungry children that could be fed with that kind of money I want to scream.

What are your thoughts on this, Abby? It makes absolutely no sense at all to me.—DAZED

DEAR DAZED: To each his own. And only a pet lover can understand the sense of putting away a beloved pet in such extravagant style. To them, their pets are their "children."

DEAR ABBY: I agree with your comment about the 73-year-old woman signed TALKS TOO MUCH. "Your son did you a kindness to tell you so."

However, I have a better way to find out if I'm talking too much. If someone interrupts me, I just keep quiet. And if nobody asks me what I was saying before I was interrupted, I know I've been talking too much. — D.D.J.

DEAR D.D.J.: Hooray for you. Most people would say, 'As I was saying. . ."

Vander Zalm a Liar, Says Bounced Barrett

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Opposition leader Dave Barrett was ordered from the legislative chamber Wednesday afternoon for one day after he repeatedly called Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm a liar.

It was the first time this session, which started more than two months ago, that an MLA has been ejected.

Barrett, who shouted "Liar" at Vander Zalm several times in the house, repeated his charge in the corridor and said his conscience would not let him withdraw the remark.

"I cannot to myself be untrue," he said as Speaker Ed Smith asked him to withdraw the "unparliamentary" comment.

"I cannot withdraw a statement of truth. The minister has just lied to the house and I can prove it."

Vander Zalm, who appeared puzzled by the charge, said outside the house he thought the opposition leader was confused.

"I guess it was just a good day for someone to get thrown out of the house," he said.

The battle revolves around two amounts of federal government money given to the provincial government as part of cost-sharing arrangements.

Opposition members have been hammering at Vander Zalm almost since the session began to find out why the money which represents increases in the federal government's share of payments, have not been "passed on" to recipients of two human resources department programs.

The amounts involved are an extra $22.50 per person per month for recipients of the Handicapped Person's Income Allowance, and an additional $35 a month for persons between 60 and 64 under the provincial Guaranteed Available Income for Need (GAIN) program.

After negotiations with the B.C. government, the federal government agreed to make those payments in addition to monies already contributed to the two programs under the cost-sharing formula.

The opposition has argued that the money should have been "passed on" directly to the recipients of the programs involved and accused the government of "pocketing" the money to increase its financial surplus.

Vander Zalm has said the money is an "adjustment" in the cost-sharing arrangements between the two governments and that it does not go into the human resources budget, but goes directly into general revenue of the province. He has said the amounts represent money which should have been paid by the federal government, but wasn't until the conclusion of negotiations.

During the question period in the legislature Wednesday, first NDP MLA Rosemary Brown (Vancouver-Burrard) and then Barrett, asked Vander Zalm whether he had issued written instructions that the $22.50 and the $35 should not be passed on to recipients.

Vander Zalm answered that he had not.

It was then that Barrett called him a liar and was ordered to leave the chamber.

Barrett outside the house produced a memo dated March 22, 1977, from Deputy Human Resources Minister John Noble which said Vander Zalm has directed that federal cost-of-living increases be "passed on in full" to senior citizens 65 and over receiving federal-provincial benefits, and to these people aged 60 and over receiving a Spouse's Allowance.

The memo, sent to all municipalities and officials of the human resources ministry, says the payments to the 60-64 seniors and to the handicapped is to remain the same.

Barrett charged that the memo made it clear Vander Zalm was withholding money which should have automatically been passed on "to cripples in this province."

Vander Zalm said the increase mentioned in the memo and the $22.50 and $35 are different issues.

The memo allowing the cost-of-living increase to senior citizens is a routine matter he said, and similar memos are sent out every three months as the cost-of-living payments are made available from Ottawa.

"We are obviously just talking about different things," Vander Zalm said.

"Somebody is reading something into this letter that just isn't there," he said.

Reporters were later shown a memo sent out some months ago which was identical to the one produced by Barrett and which had been sent to human resources staff before the issue of the $22.50 and the $35 arose.

Gastown Gamble

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council has voted to "gamble" $20,000 on a proposed waterfront market on the Burrard Inlet near Gastown.

The money will be used for preliminary design work required if the market is to open in June this year.

Total cost of the market is $400,000 which council hopes will be paid by the federal government.

SC BIAS DENIED

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt says if a referendum were held, the people of Chilliwack would likely approve the removal of 1,700 acres of farmland from the agricultural land freeze.

Speaking after the annual meeting of the Surrey Co-operative he said there was no relationship between the removal of eight acres from the farmland reserve and the fact the owner was a Social Credit party member.

The eight-acre exclusion was first raised in the legislature two weeks ago by Bob Skelly (NDP — Alberni) who said the land commission had rejected exclusion from the farmland reserve twice and the regional district had rejected it once.

The land is part of 28 acres owned by Doug Brett, who plans to use the eight acres for a new car dealership.

It was released from the reserve by the cabinet's environment and land use committee of which Hewitt is a member, after a special plea by Chilliwack Socred MLA Harvey Schroeder.

NDP ATTACKS TEL PROFITS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Telephone Co's application for a rate increase should be denied and all the company's foreign-held shares should be repatriated within two years, the B.C. New Democratic Party caucus said Wednesday.

The utilitys' financial problems should be handled by its parent company, General Telephone and Electronics Corp. of New York, and not by the B.C. ratepayers, the causus said in its brief submitted during the sixth day of a hearing into the company's rate increase application.

The brief was presented by NDP MLA Donald Lockstead and Robert Skelly to the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission hearing.

The brief said GTE of New York "manipulates unnecessary sales of services and equipment from other subsidiaries to B.C. Tel in order to siphon profits out of the province without scrutiny by the CRTC."

"During the past 15 years, GTE's consolidated net income rose from $73 million to $423 million and total assets jumped from $2.4 billion to $13.6 billion.

"Yet one of those assets, B.C. Tel., stands before this tribunal pleading that poverty demands its rates be increased so that it may attract financing for more enlargement of assets.

"Surely it can return some of the cream to stave off its subsidiary's money-starvation instead of asking this commission's blessing to feed off British Columbians again."

B.C. Tel should be ordered to stop its rapid program of replacing electro-mechanical equipment with the new analogue or ECC systems and instead revert to a gradual changeover based on public need as it arises, the brief said.

It said the utility should be required to draft long-range plans which meet the needs of the province and "not the internal needs of the GTE conglomerate structure."

The NDP caucus also said the CRTC should surrender its jurisdiction to an appropriate provincial authority, since B.C. Tel is an intra-provincial company and not a national one.

The utility is asking for permission to raise monthly residential telephone bills by 15 per cent and long-distance charges by about 10 per cent.

Thomson Heads Realtors Again

The Victoria Real Estate Board has re-elected John Thomson as president for a nine-month term.

The board also decided to change its business year to coincide with the calendar year, instead of running from April 1 to March 31.

Thomson's term as president will expire on Dec. 31. M. B. Blannin was elected vice-president for the nine months, succeeding C. L. Fraser. Eric Charman continues on the board as past president.

Elections for 1978 officers will be held in November.

Also installed will be John Jenkins, newly-elected president of the Society of Real Estate Salesmen of Victoria, who succeeds Audrey Grimshaw.

Like the real estate board, the salesmen's executive will serve for a nine-month term ending Dec. 31.

Helen Jones succeeds Jenkins as secretary.

Grimshaw becomes a board member of the Real Estate Salesmen's Association of B.C. effective April 1 and, in addition, continues as the liaison officer between the salesmen and the real estate board.

NEW BANK DROPPED

Plans to build a new Bank of Montreal branch at Oak Bay and Monterey have been abandoned in favor of enlarging premises currently occupied by the bank in the same block.

Branch manager S. D. Smith said the bank has given up the thought of moving in connection with a proposal by Danclair Developments Ltd. to demolish the one-storey buildings at the corner making way for a two-storey development including the bank.

Oak Bay residents mounted a protest when the scheme was first proposed, arguing that elimination of the small shops in their principal business district will alter the traditional character of the community.

The bank now proposes to enlarge its premises at 2219 Oak Bay

Monopolies May Be Boosting U.S. Food Prices by $662M

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Researchers told Congress Wednesday that U.S. consumers may be paying $662 million in higher grocery prices each year because of monopoly situations in the supermarket business.

The food store industry attacked the study as "flawed" and faulty.

'In most local markets only a handful of chains will be found in direct competition. This study found that consumers can expect to pay high prices for food, far higher than elsewhere, if only two or three chains dominate or compete in their local market," said Rep. Gillis Long (D-La.) in releasing the report for the joint economic committee.

These higher prices, up to 14 per cent higher than in more competitive markets, are due primarily, if not entirely, to the absence of more firms and the stiff competition they generate, according to the authors,"he added.

The report, a two-year study by University of Wisconsin researchers, was based on records of the 17 largest retail food chains which were subpoenaed by the committee.

Drs. Bruce Marion and Williard Mueller said their study showed the supermarket business is increasingly being dominated by fewer chains due to mergers which began in 1955 and continue through today.

The top four chains operating in any such concentrated market probably had monopoly overcharges" of $660 million in 1974, they said.

Where the largest four firms in any given market do 70 per cent of the business, chain store prices are about 5 per cent higher than in markets where they do 40 per cent of the business, they said.

In markets where one firm did about 35 per cent of the business amid four firms controlling 70 per cent of sales, the situation was worse — with prices 9 per cent higher.

If at First You Fail ... Get Married Again

OXFORD, England — Eleanor Exton had her own way of settling matrimonial disputes. She would simply run off and marry someone else.

A court here was told that of her five marriages, three were bigamous. She was jailed for six months on each of the bigamy charges and another six months on six charges of theft and forgery involving cheque books.

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger and Mme. Leger arrived in Newfoundland Wednesday for the first official visit to the province by the governor-general since he took office in 1974.

They are to spend the three-day visit in the western part of the province. One of the governor-general's first functions was to officially open the Atlantic drama festival here Wednesday.

DULUTH, Minn. — Arthur Meunier, who was released from prison less than a month ago after spending almost 42 of his 52 years behind bars, says he is suing Sandstone Federal Prison for $11 million.

Meunier has said his inability to cope with the civilian world often led him to commit new crimes so he could return to the safety of prison.

LOS ANGELES — Ali McGraw, whose film career has been limited to three movies, has scheduled another. The actress will star with Kris Kristofferson in Convoy, a trucking tale to be directed by Sam Peckinpah, her director in The Getaway. Her only other films were Goodbye Columbus and Love Story.

Concert Originals

Classical musicians Bruce Domoney and John Rigby, playing in an original and versatile folk idiom, will appear in concert Sunday at 8 p.m. at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone.

Guitarist Domoney and violinist Rigby have had a considerable training in classical music and have performed together and separately on the West Coast in recitals and on TV and radio.

Sunday's varied program includes many original compositions which draw on blues, folk, rock, classical and other musical idioms.

Tickets for the concerts are $3, students and senior citizens, $2.50. Reservations can be made by calling The Belfry, 385-6815.

Jazz Making Newport Comeback

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — After six years without a jazz festival in this Atlantic coast resort city, promoter Phyllis Adessi's plans for Newport Jazz '77 apparently will become a reality. At a meeting Wednesday, the state Properties Commission gave Mrs. Adessi the dates of July 1-3 she had requested. It also agreed to lease the park for $1,000 a day or four per cent of the ticket sales.

The old Newport Jazz Festivals were moved in 1971 to New York City after a near riot. That disturbance followed several years of festivals that were marred by unruly crowds.

The artists Mrs. Adessi has booked for the three-day concert include Benny Goodman, Dizzy Gillespie, Dave Brubeck, Ella Fitzgerald, Count Basie, Chick Coreia and Maynard Ferguson.

Margison Gets Bursary

Victoria tenor Richard Margison has been awarded a scholarship and accepted for the vocal program at the Banff School of Fine Arts this summer.

On Saturday at 8 p.m. he is being sponsored in a recital at Metropolitan Church, Pandora at Quadra, proceeds of which will swell his scholarship funds.

Richard will sing the Schumann Dichterliebe and songs by Bellini and Purcell, accompanied at the piano by Kristine Beny. Following his summer at Banff he plans to spend another year studying with Selina James at the Conservatory of Music before going abroad.

Canadian Wins N.Y. Medal

NEW YORK (CP) — Col. R. A. Munro of Edmonton was awarded a silver medal pin and $100 Wednesday by the Life Saving Benevolent Association of New York for saving two men from drowning in the vicinity of nearby Pelham Bay in December, 1971.

Association officials said Munro spotted an overturned boat while flying an amphibious aircraft over the area in what was described as extremely bad weather. Munro was flying to an aircraft landing base on Long Island.

He saw one man holding on to the keel of the boat while another man was floating face down in the water.

Munro, who was flying alone, landed in rough water despite crippled landing gear, jumped into the water and towed the drowning man to his aircraft. He revived the man by artificial respiration, placed him in the cockpit, then positioned the second man across one of the plane's floats and taxied to a dock.

Officials described Munro, who was unable to come to New York for the presentation, as a retired aviator and a member of Canada's Aviation Hall of Fame.

Youth Camp Brutality Reported

REGINA (CP) — An RCMP report into harsh treatment at northern Saskatchewan wilderness camps, detailing punishment handed out to delinquent boys aged 12 to 18 was tabled in the legislature Wednesday.

Gary Lane (PC—Qu'Appelle) tabled the report and demanded to know if any criminal charges had been laid.

The report, from the Prince Albert subdivision of the RCMP to the department of social services, covers an investigation of discipline at wilderness challenge camps northeast of Buffalo Narrows, Sask. The camps were operated by the Ranch Erhlo Society of Regina.

Attorney-General Roy Romanow said, as does the report, that no charges were laid because none would stand up in court.

The RCMP found that physical force was used as a disciplinary measure "and in many cases the force used amounts to an assault."

But the report says the boys at the camps have criminal records, some may be beyond rehabilitation and "their memories of dates and events is uncertain and their credibility as witnesses would be very low."

An attachment to the tabled report indicates that a supervisor at the East Norbert Lake Camp refered to the boys as psychopaths who are unstable and need harsh discipline.

The attachment says punishments included hauling logs across a lake in minus 30 celsius temperatures and boys banging their own heads against logs for five minutes then holding their hands out for half an hour while standing erect. They were beaten if they allowed their hands to fall.

It describes a boy forced to eat excess macaroni he had cooked and then being beaten until he vomited. Another boy was forced to fry and eat a bird he had caught and was at first told to eat it raw.

Other punishments included chokings, slappings and beatings, being forced to walk 1.5 miles barefoot over shale, boys being forced to strip in front of a female and being forced to dig ditches without food for three days and two nights.

The attachment says boys at the West Norbert Lake Camp slept in an attic in a large cabin with a stove at the bottom of the stairs. There would be no way to escape in case of fire.

Romanow said his department and the RCMP were continuing their investigation into the camps.

Ted Bowerman, minister of the Department of Northern Saskatchewan, told Harold Lane (PC—Saskatoon Sutherland) that Ranch Erhlo was no longer operating its camps in the north.

Bowerman said another operation, Kamp Klahanie, the subject of news reports a few months ago after a prisoner there apparently committed suicide, was still operating under a temporary licence from his department.

He said both organizations were independent of his department, but licensed by the province, which is responsible for setting standards. He said Ranch Erhlo closed its camp after the board of directors criticized activities at the site. The department suspended the license for Kamp Klahanie and replaced it with a temporary operating permit.

The Saskatoon MLA wanted to know why it had taken so long to close the camps down but he phrased his question in such a way, throwing in slogans and allegations, that the speaker ruled him out of order.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the most aggravating situations in bridge arises when the opponents reach a slam contract and your choices of leads are dangerous ones. Possibly recalling a similar situation where the dangerous lead proved costly, you lead a trump, as a "neutral," "safe" lead. At times, the trump lead is successful; and, at times, the dangerous lead would have been the winning one. In today's deal have an example of this type of problem. The hand came up in a team-of-four match.

NORTH
♡ AQJ652
◇ 8
♣ 75

WEST
♠ 65
♡ K108
◇ K954
♣ K963

♠ QJ7
♡ 943
◇ J1072
♣ Q102

SOUTH
♠ K1082
♡ 7
◇ AQ63
♣ AJ84

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠. .

When the deal was played the first time, West chose a trump opening lead, with East's jack being taken by South's king. South's singleton heart was then led, with dummy's jack being finessed successfully. Next came a low heart, South ruffing.

Dummy was now entered via the ace of trumps, both opponents following suit. The ace of hearts was then cashed, South discarding a club as West's king fell. A fourth heart lead came next, and it didn't matter whether or not East ruffed with his high queen of spades. On dummy's three established hearts, South was able to dispose of his three losing clubs. His only loser was a trump trick.

When the deal was replayed, West thought long and hard before making his opening lead. As he looked at his tripleton K-10-8 of hearts, he felt that South would be able to establish dummy's heart suit either by finessing or ruffing out a couple of hearts. Hence, based on the bidding, a passive trump lead figured to be costly.

And since South had opened the bidding with one diamond, an opening diamond lead was out of the question. Thus the aggressive lead of a club seemed to be West's best hope.

So West led the three of clubs, East's queen being taken by South's ace. South then proceeded to play the hand as his counterpart had done, establishing three heart winners in dummy. But when, after cashing the ace of trumps, he led a fourth heart off dummy, East ruffed with the queen, and led a club to West's king, for the setting trick.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, April 1

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Change routine. Refuse to be painted into psychological corner. Don't permit "wet blanket" to engulf you in gloom. Make this a time for celebration! Avoid direct confrontation. Humor, versatility are now your most valuable allies.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This is April Fool's Day, but member of opposite sex is serious. Know it and plan accordingly. If you are playing games, you'd better revise game plan. Affection, affairs of heart take precedence over other matters.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Aries message for valid hint. Be analytical — change is necessary, but find reasons "why." What had been considered secure may now require another look. Your most appealing qualities come to forefront — friendly persuasion aids in elevating position. Remember, however, that you get nothing for nothing. There is a price. No free lunch!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Adjust yourself to family situation which, at first, seems hostile. Actually, if diplomatic and patient, you will be more secure. Taurus, Libra persons figure prominently. Relatives who battle each other may want you to become involved. Don't be foolish!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Avoid impulse buying — see what is actual, not what you wish product might be. Emphasis on what you have, how to protect assets, how to get most for your money. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. A motion picture might play significant role in course you choose.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What had been speculation now looms as reality. Cycle is such that you get action—know it and don't ask for more than you can handle. Emphasis on personality, persons you attract, marital status. Older individual talks about investment. You might benefit from experience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 Oct. 22): What seemed a limitation could be product of your imagination — on negative side. Means you learn that potential is greater than immediately perceived. You will be rid of burden. There will be opportunity for wider recognition. Closed-door meeting proves of ultimate benefit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21): Take initiative — exercise independence of thought, action. Leo, Aquarius persons could figure prominently. Accent on friendship that is tested, love that survives a quarrel. Bring forth creative resources.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Follow through on hunch. You can know without knowing; you can sense what to do without completely understanding rules. Be confident of inner feelings. You are being "guided." Promotion is due — means one at top has confidence in you despite sharp differences of opinion.

CAPRICIRN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take long-range view — the sky is the limit! Know it and refuse to be held back by those of little faith — or imagination. Open lines of communication. Promote, write, publish — get message across in humorous, unique, dynamic manner. You can do it!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Financial guidance available. Don't permit pride to block progress. Check details — piece together bits of information for complete story. What was hidden now comes into view. Your sense of direction will be on target. Leo, Scorpio, Taurus persons figure in picture.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do more listening than asserting — plan, plant seeds, but avoid direct confrontations. Patience, keen observation are your allies. Make inquiries, ask questions, check telephone numbers, addresses. Virgo is very much in picture.

IF APRIL 1st IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are attractive to opposite sex, somewhat domineering, original, independent, temperamental, impulsive. You also are romantic, creative. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. June could be your outstanding month of 1977, a year which sees you co-ordinating efforts with one who has your best interests at heart. If single, marriage could be on agenda. Married or single, you'll have more responsibility and earn more money.

Grow Vegetables—Sure You Can

The urge to grow part of our food supplies is no joke, yet it hits most of us each year around April 1.

This year, the appeal is stronger than usual. It is linked not only with high prices of the foods we feel essential to our wellbeing but to the lack of the abundance to which we have become accustomed.

Commercial growing areas in the south cannot recover soil moisture reserves in a couple of months. Their crops available for export are likely to continue scarce, and high priced.

But local gardeners can do something about it. Anyone with a patch of fertile soil can grow some favorite vegetables either at ground level or in tubs and planters on sundecks and balconies.

◆ Failing all these opportunities, you can rent an allotment from the Provincial Ministry of Agriculture for $20 for the season. On a plot 25 by 50 feet you can grow $200 worth of fresh vegetables..

Lists of vegetables to grow are of little value to general readers, for each makes decisions according to own or family preferences.

There is value in suggesting unusual items lacking in most lists. The ones I mention are all of known high food value which means they can be used freely in combination with other foods, adding flavors and textures not previously enjoyed.

My list includes garlic, comfrey, kale, corn salad, white turnip. These may raise eyebrows when suggested as beginnings and essentials for vegetable growing on a small scale. Add two tomato plants for each person to be supplied.

This leaves the everyday kinds such as peas, beans, carrots, beets and potatoes to be bought. But they will be amply supplemented in nutrients by daily use of those from the unusual list.

On average vegetable plots, this last list is what is grown as routine. If the "unusual" list is added, the total quantity of vegetables needed can be raised.

It takes planning and effort. But no more than planning weekend trips which include taking foods and bedding from home to somewhere distant for two days.

At home, the relaxation comes from the doing. Meals are as informal as can be wished. Enjoyed outdoors there are more total hours spent in sunshine and comparatively fresh air than can be had on many a progressive-type trip where several daylight hours are spent in a closed car travelling dusty highways.

On this April 1, think of these things. Decide that with a bit of guidance you too can raise many fine tasting vegetables to add to meal enjoyment while cutting costs. And you can do it even though you live in apartment or condominium. And no foolin'.

FROM
$63,440
A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives
—carpeted entry lobbies to most
—daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
Prices from $63,440 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10 to 10¾%.

JERUSALEM — The Israeli government, threatened with damaging publicity and diplomatic retaliation abroad, acknowledged Tuesday night that it has been holding five terrorists in custody for more than a year and intends to try them in secret for attempting to shoot down an El Al passenger plane outside Israel.

The terse Israeli announcement of the charges against the terrorists — two West Germans and three Arabs — did not say where the attempted attack took place but West German officials in Bonn confirmed Israeli press reports that it had happened in Nairobi.

The disclosure of the secret confinement stirred criticism here and abroad Wednesday and was considered likely to cause considerable embarrassment to Kenya, one of Israel's few remaining friends in black Africa.

West Germany made an "emphatic protest" to Israel Tuesday night over the affair, a foreign ministry spokesman said in Bonn. West Germany was not informed until March 15 that the suspects had been in jail since January, 1976, the spokesman said, adding that Bonn reserved the right to take further steps after studying the case.

Tuesday night's announcement provided few details of the case and did not say how the five suspects had come into Israeli custody. The secrecy presumably stemmed from Israel's desire to cloak its war against international terrorism and its hope to avoid embarrassing Kenya.

Close co-operation between Kenya and Israel is an open secret but Kenya has never been eager to advertise the unofficial link for fear of criticism from the rest of black Africa which, like Kenya, severed official ties with Israel at the time of the 1973 war. The co-operation became most visible in July when Kenya was used as a landing site for the Israeli commando raid on Entebbe airport in Uganda.

Among the demands the Entebbe hijackers made was that five terrorists be freed, three of them Arabs said to be held by Kenya and two of them West Germans held by West Germany. Both Kenya and West Germany denied holding the terrorists. Tuesday night's announcement clears up one of the Entebbe mysteries for its is now clear that the Kenyans had already handed the five over to Israel.

Israel officials were under instructions Wednesday to say nothing beyond the official announcement, but from Israeli and foreign press accounts, as well as sources speaking not for attribution, it was possible to piece together a reasonably accurate if incomplete picture of the affair.

The announcement, made by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's military secretary, Brig. Gen. Ephraim Poran, said the El Al plane was carrying more than 100 passengers and was about to land when the terrorists tried to shoot it down with "ground-to-air missiles" The terrorists were to be tried "in the near future" by a military court behind "closed doors," he said.

The incident took place at Nairobi in January, 1976, when an El Al plane, enroute from Johannesburg to Tel Aviv, was about to land. The three Arabs were arrested by Kenyan security forces near the airport fence armed with Soviet-made heat-seeking rockets. The two West Germans, accused of being accomplices, were arrested later.

Rather than risk reprisals, the Kenyan government apparently agreed to hand over the terrorists secretly to Israel. Israel passed a law in 1971 that allows trial in Israel of persons charged with attempting to harm Israel citizens outside Israel.

The rockets allegedly came from neighboring Uganda and it seems likely that Kenyan and Israeli intelligence agencies co-operated in monitoring their preparations, enablihg Kenya to arrest them before they could fire their missiles.

The apparent reason for Israel's abrupt announcement now was that the family of one of the West Germans was about to publish details of the case in West Germany, putting Israel in an unfavorable light, sources said.

The West Germans arrested were Brigitte Schultz, 23, and Thomas Reuter, 24. Bonn authorities were notified and the prisoners' families informed only after the families had begun searching for them. West German embassy officials recently visited with the two and the parents of Schultz have come to Israel.

The Israeli foreign ministry said Wednesday night in response to the West German protest:

"Israel points out with regret that the international community has so far failed to find an efficient way to combat the Palestinian terror organizations and their accomplices. This terror is directed against innocent civilians and the foiling of the attack against the El Al plane save the lives of more than 100 passengers . . .

"Israel finds herself in the front line of this war and she will continue to defend her air routes as in the past."

The three Arabs, whose names have not been released, arrived in Kenya from Beirut in late December, 1975, with instructions reportedly to shoot down the El Al plane which would presumably be carrying both Israelis and South Africans.

It is believed here that the three Arabs were members of Haddad's Popular Revolutionary Front, a splinter group of George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. This group rejects all attempts to negotiate with Israel.

Wadia Haddas's organization, which has made a special effort to recruit foreigners, including the notorious Venezuelan terrorist known as "Carlos," is also believed to have planned the hijacking of the Air France plane to Entebbe last July.

Even when it broke relations in 1973, it was apparent that the Kenyan government harbored pro-Israeli sympathies as does much of the population.

Kenya, though, is in a difficult position because, as one of Africa's most pro-West and capitalistic countries, it cannot afford to buck the tide of the mainstream of African thought too often without becoming an outcast. It also now sees the benefits of being friend to Israel while courting Arab aid and investment.

One Centre The Limit For Saanich

Saanich planner Gil Laurenson said today that studies and market analyses suggest the community can support only one of two giant shopping centre proposals now being prepared.

He said he is not supporting one over the other but just waiting to see what each developer proposes to council.

Design Focuses on Function In UVic's New Concert Hall

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Victorians who have long dreamed of the ideal concert hall will turn shades of envious green when they see the one taking shape within the $8 million University Centre complex on the University of Victoria campus.

The hall's design may be the first in Western Canada centred purely on functional demand and carried out without alteration or modification.

Cost of the hall is $2.8 million, including equipment and furnishings.

Victoria architects John Wade and Terence Williams and acoustical expert Theodore J. Schultz designed the building, which is to be the "arrival centre" for the university which at present has no such focal point.

Close to the Finnerty Road access to the Ring Road and diagonally opposite the McKinnon Building, the University Services Building will include a sculpture court, art exhibition area, cafeteria and outdoor dining area as well as registration centre and other student services.

Over-all, the complex is designed to serve as a facility of interaction between the students, faculty, staff and public.

The 1,296-seat concert hall has been tailored to the specific needs of the music department's successful development. Orchestral and choral useage particularly have dictated its acoustical requirements.

"This is going to be one concert hall that has not been conceived as a monument to architects with important acoustical concepts thrown in as after-thoughts," Schultz said.

Schultz, currently acoustical consultant for Vancouver's renovated Orpheum Theatre which opens this weekend, is also involved with the planning of Toronto's new Massey Hall and others in San Francisco and Melbourne.

Long and detailed planning in consultation developed the break-away design, says Williams. A cascading balconylogia arrangement places the orchestra at the focal point of an elliptical-shaped seating plan which enwraps the performance area.

Balconies behind the orchestra platform will serve alternately as chorus placing for such massed performances as the recent Verdi Requiem (performed under grave handicaps in the old gym), and will also eventually be the site of an organ installation.

The hall must be equally good when meeting the different requirements of a full orchestra or a chamber group, vocal and advanced electronic music performances.

A Berlioz symphonic piece requires a "live" hall with good reverberation. A chamber group would need a dryer sound environment.

Part of the answer to this has been found in woven banners of different lengths which can be let down from above to change the environment. These will also be a colorful and exciting part of the show, says Williams. Their design is in the hands of Victoria textural artist Carole Sabiston.

Seats will be thickly upholstered so that those not occupied by audience will still be sound-absorbant. A panel arrangement above the auditorium is designed to catch early sound. In addition, unwanted sound such as exterior noise and interior mechanical noise — from air conditioners, for example — has been dealt with through use of isolation slabs and double walls at specific points.

The interior will be finished in solid hardwoods and textured concrete to reflect and diffuse all the frequencies. The design also includes "myriads of microphone and camera positions for television and other purposes," says Schultz.

He also points out a suspended speaker system that, while amplifying the human voice in a lecture situation, will pinpoint its focus with the on-stage speaker.

Possible community use is envisoned although university requirement will naturally take precedence, says a spokesman for UVic. The designers foresee no reason why the deadline of late December for completion and dry-run testings of the concert hall should not be met.

Mutter Helped Move Body, Court Told

A statement given to police by a former Victoria man contained an admission that he helped move the body of a dead man, Victoria county court was told Wednesday.

Judge M. L. T. Drake ruled the statement, given to Colwood RCMP on May 16, 1976, by Russel Benjamin Mutter, 22, of Duncan, admissible at the perjury trial of Mutter.

The Crown argued that Mutter testified at a preliminary hearing June 2, 1976, into another matter "to the effect" that he did not assist in the moving of the body.

Prosecutor Armand Petronio told Drake he was replying on Mutter's statement to police to provide corroboration of the wintess Rodney Steingenberger that Mutter helped move the body.

Defence counsel Gordon Hayes argued that Mutter lied to the police because of "police harassment" and that Steingenberger's testimony was unreliable.

Petronio replied that statements of an oppressive atmosphere surrounding Mutter were "unsubstantiated allegations and that there was "nothing to suggest that, given the nature of the case and the witnesses, that this was other than a proper and normal investigation."

The preliminary hearing was into a charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment against David John Ross, 34. Ross was subsequently convicted in B.C. Supreme Court of murder in the shooting death Nov. 1, 1975, of Malcolm Preston Cuningham, whose body was found a month later in bushes near the railway tracks and Humpback Road in Colwood.

Mutters statement to police said, in part, that he, Steingenberger and Ross drove to the spot near Humpback Road and he saw a body.

He said in the statement that Ross suggested moving the body, ane the three of them moved Cunningham 50 to 100 feet in the bush. He also saie Ross had earlier borrowed a rifle from him.

Christie said he recalled speaking to Mutter immediately prior to calling him as a defence witness at the preliminary hearing.

But attempts by Hayes to elicit from Christie the words spoken by Mutter were ruled out of order by Drake who agreed with Petronio that it was hearsay.

In cross-examination, he was asked if he recalled Mutter making a "sink Ross" comment and Christie replied that he didn't recall that being said and he denied that it was said in his presence.

Christie also said he was instructed by his client, Ross, to speak to Mutter and he was not brought from the courtroom to the corridor by Gordon Comley.

On Tuesday, RCMP Const. James Carkener said he overheard Christie tell Mutter in a courtroom corridor June 2, 1976, that he would be calling him as a witness.

He testified that Mutter replied "what the . . . wrong with you, you know what I got to say is going to sink Mr. Ross."

Christie returned to the courtroom. Comley came out to the corridor and Carkener said he overhead Mutter say "what's wrong with him" and repeat the 'sink Ross' comment.

Comley returned to the courtroom and came back with Christie. After a quiet discussion, Christie went back to the courtroom, leaving Comley alone with Mutter, said Carkener.

Carkener testified Mutter then said to Comley words "to the effect" that telling the truth would "sink Ross more" and if he liee "they'll have me for perjury."

A second RCMP constable, Marlene Collins said she overheard Mutter say to Comley and a female person "if I tell the truth Ross is sunk, if I lie they will get me for perjury. What the hell should I do?"

Hayes called no further witnesses after Drake rejected an adjournment to call Ross to testify, saying the defence had had "ample opportunity" since Mutter was committed for trial last September to make application to bring Ross from custody to court.

After both sides completed their summations, Drake reserved judgment until Friday.

Officials Hushing Rape At Pen?

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A prisoner who told a special Commons subcommittee about a gang homosexual rape at the B.C. penitentiary says officials are trying to intimidate him and the victim into dropping the issue.

Paul Leister told the subcommittee last month that a 23-year-old prisoner was raped repeatedly during an eight-week period last fall while living in the maximum-security prison's gymnasium. Prisoners were kept in the gymnasium for two months following a four-day riot which began Sept. 27 in the prison's east wing.

In a letter smuggled out to the Columbian newspaper, Leister said, "efforts are being made by prison security and officials at regional headquarters to intimidate us into dropping the demand that those who violated . . . and other young prisoners be prosecuted, in order to prevent the facts from coming out."

Leister said he wrote an earlier letter, March 21, "listing 19 things that have been done in an effort to intimidate us," but that prison security director Fred Leech, confiscated the letter, along with others to Vancouver newspapers, and refuses to mail them.

Penitentiary service spokesman Jack Stewart said that because of the sensitivity of the issue, and that because the case could come to court, the media cannot visit Leister or the alleged rape victim.

Stewart said some letters are not allowed to be sent if it would cause harm to the prisoner or the prison service.

CAR PLUNGE KILLS DRIVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — An unidentified man died Wednesday after his car went out of control on the Cambie Street bridge, crashed through the guard railing and fell 50 feet to the ground.

The car landed upside down about 20 feet from the water of False Creek.

Police said the man survived the initial crash, but died before firemen could pry apart the wreckage of his car to free him.

The date for a preliminary hearing into a second-degree murder charge against 37-year-old Robert George Gibb, of 271 Cadillac, was set Wednesday in Victoria provincial court for April 18 and 20.

Gibb is charged in a stabbing incident last Thursday in the Bastion Inn beer parlor, at 1140 Government, which resulted in the death of 26-year-old Leonard Arthur Bradley Zink, of 2994 Phyllis, Saanich.

Appearing before Judge William Ostler, defence lawyer Derek Brindle elected trial by judge and jury for Gibb.

No application for bail was made at that time and Gibb was remanded in custody.

A 53-year-old man was cleared of a fraud charge in connection with a $4,500 Local Improvement Program grant in 1975-76 in connection with making clothes for elderly citizens.

The charge was laid Sept. 22, 1976, after investigation by the RCMP's commercial crime division, but Allan threw the case out on grounds of no evidence.

Swan was represented by Dermod Owen-Flood.

An 18-year-old youth received a five-month sentence for possession of a stolen auto and impaired driving.

Gavin Robert Prior, of no fixed address, changed his pleas to guilty to both charges March 18 and was sentenced by Ostler to five months definite and five months indeterminate on the possession charge and a 14-day, concurrent sentence on the impaired charge.

Prior was arrested Jan. 26 after a short pursuit from the Oak Bay Recreation Centre by Oak Bay police.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan earlier told the court Prior was convicted Feb. 5, 1976, for two counts of breaking and entering and received a sentence of nine months definite and six months indeterminate.

Defence lawyer Douglas MacFarlane, asking for an intermittent sentence, said Prior admitted to a drinking problem.

Ostler denied the request, saying an intermittent sentence wouldn't do the young man any good, and said he would recommend the term be served at Boulder Bay, where there is a program to combat alcoholism.

Dennis Joseph Fjellstrom, 34, of no fixed address, was sentenced to nine months in jail after pleading guilty to eight counts of false pretences and one count of uttering a forged document.

Fjellstrom, also known as Jerry Lefkowitz, was sentenced in connnection with a series of bad cheques written between Nov. 20 last year, and Jan. 11 this year, in Victoria, Esquimalt, Central Saanich and Colwood.

Drinking drivers were: David Hamilton Ross May, 25, of Honeymoon Bay, fined $600; Richard Lee Madison, 33, of 3553 Happy Valley Road, $450; George Walter Clarke, 62, of 2777 Wenger Terrace, $400; Samuel Graham, 72, of 537 Walter Avenue, $400; and Jimmie Dean Strand, 35, of 931 Dufferin, Nanaimo, $400. Strand also was fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand.

Hostage Charge Laid Following Stakeout

VANCOUVER (CP) — Paul George Magnussen, 26, of Vancouver was charged Wednesday in connection with the hostage-taking of a bank manager in nearby New Westminster March 4.

Magnussen, who was arrested during a stakeout at a Vancouver house Tuesday, was remanded in custody to April 6 on charges of robbery, extortion and weapon offences.

He was charged after a man entered the Royal Bank branch with threatening note and a gun and left with $20,000 and manager Don Reid.

Police surrounded the bank in answer to an alarm while the gunman was still inside but they could not move in because the gunman held the manager as hostage.

Reid was released unharmed a few blocks from the bank, but the suspect escaped.

COKE CASE DELAY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Preliminary hearing of cocaine possession charges against Jeffrey Cohen were adjourned Wednesday to April 13.

Cohen, 25, Army and Navy department store heir, and Linda Adeline Fox, 29, are jointly charged with possession of 25 grams of cocain.

Court was told that Fox is in hospital and unable to appear, and that the Crown feels its case would be weakened if it proceeds against Cohen alone.

Professor Admits JFK Death Link, Suicides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Russian-born professor who apparently killed himself in Florida Tuesday had said he "was responsible for" the activities of Lee Harvey Oswald in Dallas, according to previously secret minutes of the House assassinations committee.

The minutes of a closed sessiosn March 17 also included testimony that the professor, George De Mohrenschildt, had indicated "there were others involved in the actual shooting" of John F. Kennedy.

The transcript was released Wednesday night after the panel won House approval to continue its investigation of Kennedy's murder in Dallas in 1963 and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s death in Memphis in 1968. The vote was 230 to 181, only hours after the controversial chief counsel, Richard Sprague, resigned.

Chairman Louis Stokes (Dem. — Ohio) accepting Sprague's resignation with "deep regret," said he was releasing the transcript of a March 16 executive session in which Sprague rebutted charges by former chairman Henry Gonzalez (Dem. — Tex.).

But Sprague's rebuttal spilled over to another closed session the next day, and that transcript contained previously unreleased details of the committee's preliminary information on De Mohrenschildt.

According to the transcript, staff member Robert Tannenbaum, said Willem Oltmans, a Dutch journalist who had covered the Kennedy assassination, approached the committee to say "he befriended a fellow who looms in the shadows of this whole investigation. His name is George De Mohrenschildt."

Oltmans, according to the transcript, said De Mohrenschildt had been in contact with him for 11 years and had visited him in Holland several weeks ago.

"The purpose of his trip was to divulge for the first time his knowledge of the assassination of the president, and he indicated that he was responsible for Oswald's activity, and that there were others involved in the actual shooting of the president," Tannenbaum reported.

"What is significant, of course," Tannenbaum told the committee, "is that George De Mohrenschildt is one person — I really have to underscore this — who is involved with Lee Harvey Oswald as a part of history; that is, he befriended Oswald and had his daughtter care for Oswald's wife and child while Oswald was living at a YMCA in Texas; so he is a person that is not a John Doe, who is coming forward, giving a confession to someone in the media."

COMPULSIVE GAMBLERS WORRY BET OFFICIALS

NEW YORK (UPI) — A few years ago, New York City established legalized horse racing gambling as a means of raising revenue. Now Off Track Betting Corp. officials are worried bettors are going overboard.

OTB officials Wednesday announced an advertising campaign to encourage the estimated 400,000 compulsive gamblers to seek help from the National Council on Compulsive Gambling.

The campaign is a step up in OTB's efforts to combat what officials say is an illness that wrecks lives and bank accounts.

For nine months, OTB has been admonishing gamblers, "Bet with your head, not over it."

"We're recognizing the fact that we could be contributing (to the problem) and we're trying to do something about it," said OTB president Paul Screvane.

U.S. Move To Start Energy Fund

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration will make a proposal at the London economic summit to create a new fund in the World Bank that could unleash energy-producing potential in less-developed countries.

The fund, which could eventually amount to $1 billion, represents a major shift in U.S. policy from a quiet opposition to using World Bank funds for financing energy development in poor countries.

The proposal, citing no specific funding level, was approved at a recent meeting of the Cabinet-level Economic Policy Group, chaired by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

The U.S. share in the energy development fund could be from $200 million to $300 million, administration sources said.

The proposed energy development fund, if approved by the major industrialized countries at the economic summit, will be presented at the ministerial meeting of the 27-nation Conference on International Economic Co-operation — the North-South talks — which are to begin in Paris May 31.

Administration sources expect members of The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, including Saudi Arabia, Kuqait and Iran, may also contribute to the World Bank fund. Saudi Arabia and Iran are members of the North-South talks.

The energy fund would provide loans, at near market interest rates, to developing countries such as Pakistan, Zaire, Angola and Brazil, which have a potential for energy development.

The purpose of the fund is to assist non-OPEC developing countries to reduce their balance-of-payments burden, and to increase non-OPEC energy production. The developing countries have been severly affected hy the rise in oil prices since OPEC quadrupled oil prices in 1973. According to Treasury estimates, these countries paid $18 billion for oil imports last year.

A 1976 World Bank study concluded that the non-OPEC developing countries "are well-endowed with energy resources, and could increase oil production by about 2 million barrels a day by 1980."

U.S. Gestures Approval To India

WASHINGTON (WP) — In a gesture of approval for India's new regime, a Senate foreign relations subcommittee voted Wednesday to repeal an anti-India measure adopted by Congress in reaction to that nation's May 1974, nuclear explosion.

Voted in July, 1974, at the urging of Rep. Clarence Long (Dem.-Md.), the existing statute requires U.S. representatives to the World Bank to vote against low-interest loans to India. However, the U.S. votes are insufficient to block the loans.

Chairman Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem.-Minn.) of the foreign assistance subcommittee described the earlier action as an ineffectual message to India to "drop dead." Humphrey added that "after 2½ years of dictatorial rule, India has emerged in a free election . . . We ought to encourage this sort of thing rather than kick it (India) around."

In proposing that the "long amendment" be repealed, Humphrey called it "an impediment to an improved relationship."

Readers Thanked For Helping

In stories daily since March 12 we've told you about this dedicated band of eight young people, who, backed with a small army of volunteers, provides a host of recreation activities for about 200 handicapped children, teens and adults each month.

Readers have responded warmly, with close to $5,000, enough to keep the centre's 17 programs running at least an extra month while the provincial government decides whether it will continue its support.

Continuing donations are welcome and can be mailed or brought direct to the centre, at 2535 Government St., V8T 4P7. The latest list of donors will be published Saturday. Donations are tax deductible.

How has the campaign by the Times and radio station CJVI changed the lives of the centre's staff? Here's their report:

Handicapped Recreation Centre

The concept of aiding the integration of the handicapped individual into the mainstretm of the community by using already existing recreation facilities is a simple but fairly new idea. The idea that joining in activities in Victoria is a right of the handicapped person rather than a privilege has been shared by only a few up to this time.

The wide exposure gained by the dignified campaign put on by the Times and CJVI has resulted in this philosophy being made known to the public. The feedback we have received reflects overwhelmingly that Victorians agree with these aims.

Perhaps the vost striking aspect of the campaign has been the expressions of interest, concern and support which we have received. It is obvious that many Victorians are willing to share what they have — be it time, energy or cash — when they realize the very real benefits to be gained.

It is reassuring to know that so many people in the community support and encourage the work done by the society. At times. especially when the bank account is running low, it is easy to wonder whether other people value the centre as much as we do who are involved day after day.

Judging from the large list of contributors, the thousands of dollars collected, the letters and calls received, it is apparent that Victorians agree with our objectives and are willing to give us full support.

Our programs offer a continual learning experience for staff, participants, volunteers and members of the public we come into contact with during activities. The coverage we have received is helping to break down the stereotype thinking and feeling that a lot of handicapped people had to put up with in the past.

The money raised to date has enabled us to meet salary and other operating expenses with no reduction in the number or quality of the programs offered. The money will last through April.

We have just learned from federal government officials that our Canada Works application has been rejected. We were considered acceptable by the ministerial advisory board, but there was not enough cash available to fund our "worthwhile" project. Now we are waiting for the results of the provincial government review and the Intermunicipal Committee deliberations on whether they will fund the society for this fiscal year. There are a lot of people relying on this funding coming through.

We would like to thank all the people who have shown their support to us during this campaign. The efforts of the staff of the Times and CJVI are especially appreciated as they have taken the time and been interested enough to understand and report on our goals in a clear and straightforward manner.

Thank you.

Private School Aid

Education Minister Pat McGeer Wednesday introduced promised legislation to provide financial support to independent schools in B.C.

The actual amount of money to be provided under the Independent Schools Support Act is not spelled out in the legislation and McGeer said it will be some time before the amount is known.

The act, McGeer said, is a recognition by B.C. that "once province-wide school system does not provide sufficient choice for all parents to select the form of education their children will receive."

There are about 120 independent schools in B.C. with a total of about 23,000 students.

The funding of independent schools works on the basic principle that the more money they receive, the more accountable they must be to the government.

The legislation provides three different levels of funding for the schools to choose from, or they may choose not to participate at all.

There are three basic requirements for a school to be eligible for funding under the act:

—They must not sponsor any program which would foster or promote racial or ethnic superiority, religious intolerance or persecution or social change through violent action;

—School buildings must meet adequate standards;

—The schools must have been in existence for five years.

The first level of funding under the act, the non-instructional support grant, is designed to cover operating costs in the non-teaching areas.

The second level of funding, an instructional support grant, will provide payment of teachers' salaries. To receive this type of grant a school must meet certain specified standards in the areas of curriculum, evaluation and teacher certification.

The third funding level, a local support grant, would permit a local school board to authorize the provincial government to pay a percentage of the per pupil operating cost of the independent school,

To receive the third grant a school must show that it is providing a special educational service to the community

Budget Due Tonight

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald was scheduled to bring down his second budget at 5 p.m. (PST) today.

Macdonald had promised an expansionist budget which could bring tax breaks for lower income earners. The general view, however, was that this would not be a particularly startling budget because Macdonald did not have much room for financial manoeuvring.

Ottawa may heed as much as $6 billion in borrowed money this year, a figure regarded by economists as near the upper limit of how much the government can absorb from the capital market and still leave enough for the private sector.

New Liquor Laws: Moderation Key

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Wine price cuts were announced today by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair in a bid to wean British Columbians away from hard liquor and beer.

The price cuts — effective May 1 — should average between 20 and 40 cents a bottle for both domestic and foreign wine.

Mair said the move reflects his view that wine is the drink of moderation.

The province's local wineries are encouraged under new liquor regulations announced by Mair to produce a product more acceptable to the palates of British Columbians.

The price cuts in wine will mean a drop in revenue to the government of $5 million to $6 million a year, Mair said.

The changes also allow for the first time a neighborhood pub-type of small, intimate drinking establishment serving both draught beer and hard liquor to be set up in hotels.

But the idea of selling wine and beer in corner grocery stores and the sale of hard liquor in beer parlors has been rejected.

British Columbians should develop a taste for wine, Mair said, and the new regulations reflect his rejection of the idea that beer is the drink of moderation.

"If there is a drink of moderation, wine is it," he said.

"We are taking some steps to encourage the consumption of wine, both imported and domestic, and hope that British Columbians will drink more of it — and less hard liquor and beer."

The price reductions will be brought about by a decrease in the percentage of markup.

The markup on B.C. wines will be reduced from 66 per cent to 46 per cent and the markup on imported wines will decrease from 117 per cent to 100 per cent.

But a bottom limit of $2.75 has been established for foreign wines, at least for a while.

A variety of changes in marketing and distribution rules have been made to allow British Columbia wineries to compete with the more established foreign brands.

Now, when British Columbians reach for their favorite French bordeaux at the liquor

NEWS BRIEFS

Challenge for AIB

OTTAWA (TNS) — In a progress report released Wednesday the Anti-Inflation Board said the next six months would be challenging. The report noted that controls have been in effect for almost 18 months and that since its inception inflation has come down in Canada. See Page 23.

Fire on Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — At least five persons were killed today in a pre-dawn fire aboard the Spanish factory trawler Dianteiro, 350 miles east of St. John's, Nfld., the search and rescue centre reported here.

Coffee Hits $4.43

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Folger Coffee Co. sent its wholesale price tag flying again Wednesday to a record $4.43 a pound.

Volcano Erupts

MOSCOW (UPI) — The long-dormant Los Island volcano in the Caspian Sea has staged a massive eruption that covered three quarters of the island under 23 feet of mud and rock, the official Tass news agency said today.

Pilot Goes Berserk

ZAMBOANGA, The Philippines (CP) — The pilot of a chartered airliner carrying military men on leave went berserk during the flight today, stepped out of the cockpit and opened fire with an automatic rifle, killing seven passengers and a stewardess, authorities said.

20 Day Break For Session

Party whips have agreed to a 2½-week adjournment of the legislature from April 6 to April 25, says government whip George Mussallem (SC — Dewdney).

NDP whip Dennis Cooke (NDP — New Westminster) confirmed that the opposition parties have agreed to the adjournment.

Mussallem said the government had proposed a one-week adjournment, but extended the recess at the request of the opposition parties.

In other legislative business, NDP leader Dave Barrett Wednesday became the first MLA to be ejected from the house this session.

Barrett got the heave-ho after refusing to withdraw a statement that Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm had lied to the legislature. See story on Page 29.

TRUDEAUS SEPARATING?

OTTAWA (CP)— A spokesman for the prime minister's office said today that it is extremely unlikely that Prime Minister Trudeau and his wife, Margaret, have agreed to a separation,

He was commenting on a report last night by Toronto television station CFTI that the Trudeaus had decided to separate.

The prime minister's press secretary said that because he had not talked to Trudeau on Wednesday night, he was unable to deny the report officially.

Goldstream Park Hit By Teen-Age Vandals

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A wave of teenage vandalism has hit Goldstream provincial park since the start of the spring school break.

"I just wish parents would visit their teenage children," park warden Les Ledson told the Times. "I'm certain some of them would get a shock."

Some teenagers he said, including girls, have been kicked out of the park after being found "drunk and disorderly."

Ledson said about 125 teenagers have been camping in the park since the break started.

He said trees have been chopped down and de-barked.

Campsite tables have been hacked up for firewood.

Tables have been carved and jabbed with knives.

Ledson has also seized a .22-calibre rifle as well as an air pistol, an air rifle and a machete.

"The strange thing is that Goldstream seems to be the only park where we have problems," Ledson said.

Ledson said he was concerned to find teenagers with guns in their possession.

"Air pellet guns can be lethal," he said. "Some of the pellets were flying precariously close to two girls walking down the road. We seized the air rifle. The boy said he was firing at a garbage can."

Ledson said it is unlawful for any person under 18 years to be carrying any firearm, including air guns, unless accompanied by an adult.

No firearms are allowed in provincial parks, in any event, he added.

RCMP were called when a youth was found with the .22 rifle, but no charge was laid at Ledson's request.

Ledson said only education will solve the vandalism problem.

"Some young people don't know how to relate once they are in a wilderness atmosphere," he said. "They hack at trees with axes. They think once they are away from the city, they are at liberty to do anything."

He said most young people will listen to reason, but it is "pretty hard" to get through to them.

"They were boozed up with liquor," he said.

He said any liquor found around campsites is seized.

"We just take the beer away," he said. "Teenagers won't claim it because they are under age.

"Some kids tell me that I pick on teenagers," Ledson said.

"All I'm trying to do is to prevent them from hurting themselves and others when they are under the influence of liquor."

Carter Sticks to Plan

WASHINGTON (WP)—President Carter, attempting to seize the political initiative in the wake of another deadlock in strategic arms limitations talks, said Wednesday he will "hang tough" in pressing the Soviet Union to accept one of the American proposals that were rejected in Moscow.

However the president insisted that he was neither surprised nor discouraged that the initial attempt to reach agreement on sweeping reduction in nuclear arms had failed. Moreover, he added, he found it "very encouraging" that the Soviets agreed to continue the negotiations with a new round of talks scheduled for May in Geneva.

The president said the Russians insisted that the Nixon and Ford administrations had agreed not to deploy the American Cruise missile. This, he said, was the major stumbling block preventing agreement on the more modest of the two U.S. proposals — to have the two countries simply ratify the nuclear arms levels set in the 1972 Vladivostok agreement.

Carter said he rejects this contention — and is supported in this by both former president Ford and former secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger — and will continue to seek agreement on the main American proposal, which calls for "substantial reductions" in strategic nuclear weapons, a ban on deployment of new nuclear weapons system and to limit missile test firings.

But in response to a question, the president also warned that lack of any progress during the May talks in Geneva could force the United States to step up new weapons development.

"Obviously, if we feel at the conclusion of (the May)discussions that the Soviets are not acting in good faith with us and that an agreement is unlikely, then I would be forced to consider a much more deep commitment to the development and deployment of additional weapons," he said.

"But I would like to forego that decision until I am convinced the Soviets are not acting in good faity," he added.

Oscar Pays for Holiday

Jorgenson, wife Pat . . . and grand prize

They had just decided to cancel a California trip this summer to save up enough to put down on a new house.

Then the word came Wednesday.

"This is wonderful, just wonderful," Jorgensen said when the announcement was made.

"We will have our holiday after all. This is exactly what we needed. Our luck seems to be continuing."

Jorgensen was referring to the $250,000 prize he shared with the rest of the Victoria police force in 1976. That cash is all held in trust and is paid out only when a policeman leaves or retires. In the early years the payment is $100 per year so as a four-year man Jorgensen's entitlement so far is $400, if he were to leave.

★

"In addition to that, I have gone in with four friends into Loto-Canada and we have won several small prizes — enough to keep us going. It seems to be our lucky year."

His luck continued in the Academy Award contest when, in addition to winning the grand prize, he won a minor prize as well, a copy of Life Goes to the Moves.

The odds against one person winning two awards were phenomenal because there were more than 6,000 entries in all.

The drawing took place at the Capitol Theatre Wednesday afternoon where a crowd of 1,200 saw the premiere of Voyage of the Damned and picked up free bottles of perfume and loaves of bread.

These awards were drawn from among the 35 entries who had correctly predicted that Rocky, Faye Dunaway and Peter Finch would win the three major Oscars.

The book awards were selected from among the 6,000 other entries who had tried but missed on at least one Oscar.

NEW HOMES FROM $63,440
A quiet, close to town subdivision — 3 cul-de-sacs to choose from — no-through streets. Not the typical feeling — some level lots, others with lake views or look over surrounding area. Some nestled into trees just like living in the country, yet 5 minutes from town. These homes are priced to sell and going quickly. Consider some of these extra features:
—rockwork faced entries, concrete drives
—carpeted entry lobbies to most
—daylite basements — easy to develop that extra 4th bdrm, party-room or second full bath
—many have 2 finished rock-faced fireplaces
—fancy wallpapers, extra finishing
—walk to busline, shops, all schools.
Prices from $63,440 up to $69,750 and two unique 1½-storey homes nearing completion at $78,900. Low down payments possible to qualified purchasers. Vendor may carry a second mortgage. Interest rates 10% to 10¾%.

KITCHENER MAN SLIDE VICTIM

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — A skier killed Wednesday in an avalanche near Lake Louise in Banff National Park is an unidentified 22-year-old man from Kitchener, Ont., an area police spokesman said.

Park Superintendent Andy Anderson said two persons were skiing together near a major ski run when one of them was caught by the avalanche and carried into some trees.

Anderson said it is believed the victim died of a broken neck.

It was the 11th fatality in avalanches in the Canadian Rockies this winter and the second in four days.

Shirley Louise Olvier, 31, of Cranbrook, B.C., died Sunday and four others were injured in a snow slide that swept down on 25 cross-country skiers in the Citadel Pass about 15 miles west of Banff.

FIRST GIRL in the history of scouting in Canada to receive the Queen's Venturer award, Kathleen Mary Kenyon, 17, of Shawnigan Lake receives congratulations from Lt. Governor Walter Owen following presentation at Government House Wednesday while fellow award winners David Fisher and Bill Nenninger of Burnaby look on. To receive top award in Venturers' section, scouter must perform extensive service to public and scouting movement. Among 22 honored Wednesday were Timothy Shepherd and Clifford Smith of Victoria. 'Bullied' Metis Won't Go

FORT McMURRAY (CP) — A native trapping community here is being bullied into moving by this oil-boom town, Stan Daniels, president of the Metis Association of Alberta, claimed Wednesday.

He said the town and a construction company building high-rise apartments for oil sands workers are trying to get a settlement of 15 families to leave their homes. The town and the company deny the bullying charge.

A 13-storey high-rise is going up a few feet away from the native families, whose back doors open onto the Snye River. And an eight-foot-high board fence was erected to separate the construction site from the settlement.

"The fence is an insult to these people," Daniels said.

"They have been subjected to disgraceful bullying. The company blocked off the route to let garbage trucks through.

"Authorities hope the natives will move away quietly. But there has been a native community on the banks of the river as long as there have been people in this area."

Trapper Michel Gladue, 70, ane his wife Christine, 62, said they don't want to move even though their house has no inside tailet or running water.

"We have lived here so long we would hate to move now," said Michel, who traps fox, beaver and lynx. "I was born in this area."

Widow Harriet Foley, 76, who lives alone in a one-room cabin, said: "I don't know anything about having to move. I would hate it. They would have to carry me away."

Daniels said negotiations to relocate the natives have been going on with the town and the provincial government for two years but nothing has come of them.

He said he was told the settlement was on Crown property but he thought the community had aboriginal rights to the land.

"The provincial government and the town are both well aware of the situation and have been dragging their heels, to put it mildly," he said. "If any attempt is made to evict these people there will be many standing with them."

Mayor Chuck Knight said the settlement was on a road allowance and the people could be termed squatters.

But Knight acknowledged many of the natives had lived on their present sites for years and the town had a responsibility to the group. He said any question of aboriginal rights is a federal government matter.

Knight dismissed any claims of bullying as nonsense and said the provincial government has agreed to provide mobile homes and service lots for the natives — but it had come down to a question of land.

"The natives have indicated they are willing to co-operate and we feel they must have land near their present location to enable them to carry on using their boats and dogs to get to trap lines.

"But private developers own most of the downtown land and the provincial government owns all the land on the town's perimeter.

"We would like to see the province swap some land for a suitable site. The next move is up to the government."

Gordon Thomas, executive assistant to the provincial native affairs minister, said his department, the housing department, the town and the Metis association discussed the issue in the spring of 1976.

"It was decided the town would identify a suitable location for these people with the help of the Metis association," he said.

"The department of housing and public works was to supply trailers. We are still waiting to hear where the land is and when the move is to be made. The onus is on the municipality."

Northward Developments are building the 141-apartment tower next to the settlement to house Syncrude Canada Ltd.
